Canada, Stallings agree roads is main issue

By Ed Meyers

With the upcoming general election less than a month away on Nov. 3, Beach voters will choose whether or not they want to keep Joe Canada as their State Senator or replace him with Moody E. (Sonny) Stallings Jr., the Democratic challenger.

And while each candidate has his own views on the various issues, one thing they both agree on...the importance of new roads for the resort city.

Stallings doesn't feel Canada has done much for roads and points to his recent attendance in Northern Virginia at "Transportation 88" as evidence of ignoring the local problem.

Canada, however, points out that "one needs to work with other areas of the state."

"It took two years to change the highway funding bill which had Virginia Beach at the bottom of the appropriation list," Canada stated.

According to the incumbent, the legislature had previously been controlled largely by rural areas of the state. "The metro areas got together to help each other with their respective problems with traffic as well as other things," Canada said. His journey to Northern Virginia was to help enlist support for Virginia Beach.

Stallings said Canada accepted a campaign contribution from his

Pace running to give voters choice

Also on the Nov. 3 ballot, but running a rather low-key race, is Louis Pace, a former candidate for city council.

Pace, running as an independent, was actually the first to announce as a candidate in opposition to Canada.

He listed growth, water, schools, roads and the 24th Street Park as his major points of issue and said "I decided to run just to give the voters a choice. I was tired of going into the voting booth and seeing only one name on the ballot."

In a private poll he took, Pace said another reason he decided to run was apparent voter dissatisfaction with Canada.

Spending-wise, Pace has about $4,000, most of that in the form of a personal loan, and has only used $800 thus far.

Northern Virginia trip and he should return it.

However, Canada, while not denying a contribution, indicated

Stallings should worry about his own funds more.

According to the senator, "Stallings is under federal investigation for illegally using my contributor list and he has said he used my list," Canada asserted.

A good example of getting support from other areas of the state for a project was, according to Canada, the Virginia Marine Science Museum.

"It had good local support, but not enough money could be raised," Canada stated. "I invited the entire State Senate to Virginia Beach for a weekend, got hotel rooms donated and wound up the visit with a slide presentation about the museum. We then got the needed funds from the legislature," he said.

Stallings, who also feels schools are an important issue, wants to have a "literacy

The sale, which got underway last week, features a first prize of a trip to Paris, a 1988 Jaguar XJ6 and a 1988 Porsche 924S, with a second prize of a mink coat and third prize of a Rolex watch. Last year's grand prize was a new Rolls-Royce Silver Spur.

The raffle drawing will be on Dec. 1 at the Cavalier Beach Club.

For information call Don Rollins at 496-0993, Bob Smith at 467-3438, or Don Biernot at 640-2500.

Lynnhaven Jr. HS national winner

Lynnhaven Junior High School has been chosen as a National Secondary Exemplary School by the United States Department of Education.

The honor, the first for any school in southside Hampton Roads, will be recognized at a school assembly on Friday beginning at 9 a.m., at which time Congressman Owen Pickett will speak.

Among the criteria in qualifying for the award was the quality of the teaching staff and the amount of parental involvement.

George McGovern, Lynnhaven Jr. H.S. principal of the 1200 student school, said the assembly would be outdoors, weather permitting.

Oceana Lions fish fry Oct. 13

Windsurfers legal again in Lynnhaven

Windsurfers in the Lynnhaven Inlet channels and approaches are legal once more.

City Council Monday repealed its ordinance excluding windsurfers from the areas, approved amidst considerable controversy during the summer.

A public hearing was held by Vice Mayor Meyers Oberndorf and Councilman Robert Fentress with the windsurfers and other boaters involved, and they found the provision unduly restrictive.

"We saw a more responsible attitude" among the windsurfers, said Oberndorf.

Upside down

An accident about 6 p.m. on Oct. 1 at the intersection of 17th Street and Cypress Avenue resulted in $3,000 damage. According to police reports, Jerome B. Garcia, 21, NAS Oceana, was headed eastbound on 17th in a 1983 Toyota truck when he collided with a 1983 Oldsmobile being driven on Cypress Avenue by Edward D. Bonney Jr., 46 of the Beach. Garcia's truck sustained $2500 in damages and he was treated for injuries at the scene by the Virginia Beach Squad. He also received a summons for failure to yield. (Sun photo by Ed Meyers)

City council debates $70,000 tab for dinner

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City Council seems to be reluctant to be extravagant for its 25th anniversary extravaganza next year.

At issue is the elegant dinner tentatively scheduled for Jan. 9 which, as Councilwoman Reba McClanan remarked, will eat up a big chunk of the budget, $70,000 to $80,000 of it.

City Council had been informed about the dinner and the other anniversary activities at a work session more than a month ago, and also was told how much the committee would need from the city - $150,000 with private subscriptions paying for the other $65,000 of the budget.

But Monday afternoon, Mike Barrett, a city coordinator of the program subbing for chairman Nancy Creech, asked for the money.

Before Council put the request on next Monday's docket by an 8-3 vote, members questioned spending so much for the opening banquet. Although diners will be charged $25 a plate, this amount will not take care of the entire cost.

Taking so much for the cost of the dinner is one-sided, said Councilwoman Reba McClanan. She wanted to know whether the committee had considered raising the money from the public.

Barrett said the committee wanted something it could point to with pride.

Councilman John D. Moss said that it might be better having a bigger activity including more people. He said he wasn't sure how many people could afford a $50 dinner for two. "A public dinner party rubs me the wrong way."

Barrett said the committee had looked at a large range of alternatives from a beach party to a black-tie affair. The chosen banquet was approved unanimously by the committee, he said.

No game: Local hunters say wildlife being decimated

By David Spector

When Captain John Smith first stepped ashore in Virginia Beach, he was unaware that he had stumbled across one of the most abundant wildlife areas in the New World.

Surrounded by herds of deer, rabbit, turkey, and squirrel, the new settlers were constantly replenishing their stores.

And so the rich sporting history of Hampton Roads was born.

The situation is entirely different now. After centuries of commercialization and development, some say the wildlife population of Hampton Roads has been nearly decimated. It is this alleged selfishness on the part of some local developers thatangers hunters like Portsmouth's Mac Evans.

Evans, who brought down his first deer over 40 years ago, maintains that in the last 15 years alone the lands available for hunting have been cut in half.

"You just about have to be a member of a hunt club these days," the hunt game, says Evans.

As proof of the desperate lack of adequate hunt areas, Evans offers the razing of the Dismal Swamp.

"What was once a 4,000 square acre wilderness is now just one huge open field." Along with development, Evans cites the advent of the four-wheel drive vehicles and the lack of respect some hunters have for farmer's property as the main reasons for much land being declared "off-limits" to local sportsmen.

The combination of over-hunting and the rapid development of lands most habitable to wildlife has greatly decreased the once-large hunting population.

Will Petree can relate to Evans' feelings. Petree, the director of Northwest River Park in Chesapeake, spends much of his time protecting what's left of indigenous game. But while Evans blames the developers, Petree cites the self-destructiveness of the hunters themselves.

"It's the slob-hunters that ruin it for everyone," Petree says. "They give all the hunters a bad name."

What Petree means by "slob hunters" is the poachers who abuse the kindness of area farmers. Selfish individuals are those who come invited onto private lands and "just start blasting away at everything that moves." The human injuries and disastrous effects on the wildlife have left the landowners liable, causing them to shut their doors once and for all to "slob-hunters" and law abiding hunters alike.

Even the federally protected areas like Northwest River Park, and False Cape State Park have frequent incidents of hunter encroachment.

So the combination of over-hunting and the rapid development of lands most habitable to wildlife has greatly decreased the once large hunting population.

Michael Pender, a Virginia Beach hunter for more than fifteen years, says with remorse, "It's just not the same anymore." Pender, points to a housing project near Redmill Farms in Virginia Beach. "I can remember enough here so that you couldn't shoot 'em all in one season, now all there is around here is houses and shopping malls," he says with more than a little regret.

According to Roger Spruill, however, Mother Nature has had a lot to do with the lack of adequate hunting in the area. Spruill, the vice-president of the Virginia Wildlife Federation, attributes the demise of hunting in the area to other causes than development or poaching.

Spruill says, "Due to weather, pollution, and the modernization of farming practices, a lot of the area wildlife has departed."

He points to the Dismal Swamp area as a perfect example. "Back in the 30's when they drained the swamp, they lowered the water table until it reached a point where it became too dry for the animals to live off of."

Spruill, an area hunter since 1950, is also a proponent of the hunt clubs. These clubs he maintains, take extra precaution in obeying all the existing hunting laws. Especially the blaze orange clothing requirement. They also make contact with the landowners, securing their approval prior to hunting the land.

Did you register?

Probably one of the busiest workers in the city last week was General Registrar Marlene Hagar. With the deadline now past to register to vote in the upcoming Nov. 3 general election, Hagar's office was deluged with last minute inquiries from Beach residents on how and where to register.

The mission of her office is to provide an accessible and fair means by which residents can register and vote. The main office is at the Municipal Center and 12 permanent satellite locations with 27 assistant registrars providing the base for a variety of days and hours for registration.

Last year, there were 108 additional special voter registration sites, which far exceeded the number required by law. Hagar's office apparently went out of its way to give you the chance to vote.

Approximately 250,000 records are maintained by this office. During 1986, 7,800 citizens were either newly registered or transferred into the city. Some 36,670 voted in the councilmanic election, 65,283 in the congressional election, and 5,344 in the special election in the 81st House of Delegates district.

The latter election had to be held when former delegate Owen Pickett was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives to replace retiring Congressman Bill Whitehurst.

In the 56 precincts, over 400 election officials assisted voters and over 2,500 voters applied for absentee ballots.

A major priority was to provide assistance to the physically impaired to make it easier for them to vote. One of the goals was handicapped-accessible polling locations which included parking availability at each site.

In addition, specialized voting equipment was installed, offering such items as an easy handle booth and a magnifier. Each site had one voting booth lowered and widened to facilitate easy access by wheelchair.

Informational brochures on voting and registration were translated into braille, and tape recordings were also made for the visually handicapped.

The general registrar became, in 1986, the city's first registrar to be elected president of the State Voter Registrars Association.

While the population of the city is approximately 360,000, a first glance of just over 122,000 voters registered is misleading.

Of the 360,000 total, Hagar pointed out there are 56,000 in the city schools and about 90,000 military that are, for the most part, registered to vote in their respective home states.

There was an increase this year in new persons registered to vote of 8,500 with some 2,000 in the last two weeks.

However, 35,000 are expected to register for the 1988 presidential election. Over 100,000 resort city voters cast ballots in the 1984 election.

It is expected that 50,000 will vote in next month's general election. - E.M.

D.J. and Penn State

Kempsville's own D.J. Dozier, the number one draft pick of the Minnesota Vikings, and six of his teammates from Penn State's number one ranked team have decided to let the memories of their National Championship win over Miami's Hurricanes linger a little longer.

The seven have commissioned a series of four full color, two-foot by three-foot posters commemorating the 14-10 upset victory.

Joining Dozier in the poster effort are Buffalo Bills #1 selection Shane Conlan, Tim Manoa, a third round selection of the Cleveland Browns, Don Graham, a fourth round choice of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Tim Johnson, sixth round selection by the Pittsburgh Steelers, Bob White, also a sixth round pick, by the San Francisco 49ers, and David Clark, a free agent addition to the Bills 1987 training camp roster.

The first of the five posters in the collection is titled "A Century of Excellence. The Tradition Goes On." In it the seven Penn State teammates are in uniform and recreate the flag raising on Iwo Jima at the conclusion of World War II, using the Penn State flag.

According to Philadelphia lawyer Rich Puleo, who represents all seven players, D.J. and the rest of the guys wanted to do this because they felt it would be a good opportunity for them to pursue...above and beyond marketing their skills as very good football players.

Auto-mobile madness

Automobiles...bah,humbbug! While they are hardly considered a luxury item any more, one can barely exist without them.

However, did you ever get the feeling you wanted to take a sledge hammer to yours?

You have this clunker that does not always run. Or you have one that is not a clunker, but it is not a new one either. If you're lucky you have a new one and it runs fine.

Unfortunately, my car falls in the middle category. And it runs, but not nearly like it should.

People speed by me quite often, probably wishing I'd get it fixed so it would run faster.

But I've tried to get it fixed. Believe me I have. From the day I bought it at one of those used car dealers that advertise, "Ride today, unless you don't pay anyone." While I paid a few people, it wasn't enough to get a new car, so I got stuck, with, in nice terms, a lemon.

Did you ever try to get a used car fixed after you've driven it off the lot? Well, forget it.

I didn't have the car, a 1983 Chevette, three months when the engine blew up on me one Saturday night late on the Virginia Beach Expressway. And that was after I'd already spent about $200 and a lot of inconvenience trying to get it to run properly.

I've come to hate this car and the dealer, who no doubt knew what he was selling.

My next automobile will be what I want, and from a (hopefully) reputable dealer that isn't out to "stick it to you."

This time I had a problem even finding anyone to come tow it. It seems on Saturday night unless you've been in an accident, most tow companies don't want to bother with you. They're too busy waiting for the police to call them to haul away wrecks and illegally parked cars.

I wound up with a bill over $800 for another engine no less, but I thought it would be worth it so the car would run like it should.

Wrong again!

It ran only marginally better and then last month, while out of town, the fuel pump went out. That was another $150, which got it running again, but not any better.

In doing some investigation about the engine, I found I could have had it fixed for approximately $200, by a DEALER, no less. Most dealers have to pay their mechanics so much the average person can't afford to get their car repaired there.

But then you take it to the neighborhood mechanic at the local station [if you're lucky enough to find one that still gives service], and they repair it the easiest way for THEM, which isn't always the cheapest for you.

The other day I forgot to turn off my lights after coming to work in the fog, so my battery was dead when I tried to go home. A jump was easy enough to get me going, but now the battery doesn't turn over in the morning like it should. And then the knob on my driver's window broke.

Consumer Comments

Q: I live in Virginia Beach and wonder what exactly is the purpose of having a will and when is a good time to make one?

A: A will is a way of expressing your wishes after you die. By preparing this type of legal document now, you can be assured that your property and values will be distributed the way you want them to be distributed later. A will allows you to decide which possessions you want to give to whom. It should be drawn up by a lawyer and is only valid if properly signed by the testator (the person who is making the will) and witnessed by two people who are not beneficiaries. Store your will in a safe deposit box. There is no magical age that you must wait to reach before you write a will. It's important to have one if you have a family to protect or a large number of investments and a hefty bank account to secure. Writing a will doesn't mean that you're getting old or are ready to die. It's simply a smart way of preparing for the future. With a properly prepared will, you can decide who will handle your estate, name a guardian for your children if they are still minors and eliminate the expensive cost of court proceedings.

If you die without a will, the state will make your decisions for you. An administrator for your estate will be appointed. This administrator will usually be a family member, but without a will nothing is definite. The estate's administrator may have to post a bond if there is no will, and this can be expensive. The state will also decide which of your possessions will go to whom. In the state of Virginia, if a man with a wife and children dies without a will, the wife will get all of the property unless one or more of his children are from a different mother. Then the wife will get 1/3 of the estate and the children will receive the remaining 2/3. It's easy to see why a will is so important. It allows you to distribute your possessions fairly, as you see fit.

Never prepare a will on your own. It's always best to seek a practicing lawyer's advice and supervision first. Your lawyer should draw up the will according to your wishes. It's a good idea to write a list of all your possessions and who you want them to go to before the lawyer actually writes the will. That way you won't forget anything or anybody. Don't agree to use a ready-made will that looks like a form and has blank spaces for pertinent information. These will often not hold up in court if a law suit should arise.

Even if you are single with no family, a will is still necessary. Most people want to decide for themselves where all of their hard-earned dollars will go after they die. Some people may decide to donate their money to a favorite charity, hospital or school. Regardless of your age or marital status, it's always a good idea to have a will. Don't neglect to make a will because you feel that you have no possessions of real value. The actual worth of your insurance policies, pension plan, and personal property, such as furniture, jewelry and an automobile, is often a lot more than you may think.

Refuge Manager, Anthony

Leger, has announced that the 1987-1988 Federal Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp, better known as the "Duck Stamp," is available for sale at Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge. The stamps may be purchased for $10 at the Refuge's Visitor Contact Station located at 4005 Sandpiper Road. The hours of the facility are from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. "Each stamp purchased at the Refuge includes a certificate suitable for framing and an informational brochure on the Duck Stamp program," Leger added.

All waterfowl hunters, 16 and older, are required to carry a duck stamp when in the field. The stamp is also valued by stamp collectors and by non-hunters who purchase them in an effort to support wildlife. Proceeds from the sale of Duck Stamps are used to help preserve critical wetlands which benefit many wildlife species.

This year's stamp by artist Arthur G. Anderson, features a trio of redhead ducks in flight over a backwater marsh. Anderson chose the marsh habitat as a background for his one female and two male redheads because "just about anyone in the country would be able to identify with it," he said.

The Duck Stamp program was initiated in 1934 when Congress passed the Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp Act. Since then, over 90 million Duck Stamps have been sold, providing more than $300 million for the purchase of more than 3.5 million acres of prime wetland habitat for waterfowl. The first Duck Stamp design was created by J. N. "Ding" Darling in 1934 and featured a pair of mallards in flight. Subsequent artwork was commissioned until the annual Duck Stamp Contest began in 1949.

Capital outlay costs should be included in state aid

Let's Talk

By Rob Jones
President
Virginia Beach
Education Assoc.

Virginia still holds classes in a log cabin and others have broom closets that out-class the portable classrooms in Virginia Beach.

In a report to the General Assembly last year, the Joint Legislative Audit and Review Commission staff pointed out in its report on funding the Standards of Quality that "capital outlay and debt service costs appear to fit into SOQ costs conceptually. Capital costs are involved in providing for basic educational programs. Furthermore, a case can be made that SOQ requirements, such as caps placed on class sizes, may directly contribute to capital outlay needs." The Virginia Education Association believes that the Commonwealth should assist localities in meeting capital outlay costs.

Proposed improvements in the Standards of Quality will force school divisions to lower class size in grade one and English classes. In Virginia Beach, this improvement will entail more than hiring a couple more teachers. Classroom space must also be made available and this is why VEA's push for capital outlay costs being shared by the state is so important to Virginia Beach.

While Virginia Beach is the largest city in Virginia, it certainly is not the wealthiest. If the children in Virginia Beach are to have equal educational opportunity as those in more affluent parts of the state, then state aid is appropriate and necessary. Portable classrooms are less than ideal. Music and art classes conducted from carts in regular, crowded, rooms cheat students and frustrate and anger teachers and parents. Virginia Beach needs to reduce class size across the board and there appears to be a growing commitment to do so.

If the General Assembly can be convinced of the merit of helping out localities with their capital outlay costs, the school children in Virginia Beach will achieve educational equity sooner. And on behalf of the children in overcrowded and/or inadequate classrooms, the sooner the better.

The background for this week's column is taken from a report presented at a public forum on Excellence and Equity for Virginia's Public Schools held at Lake Taylor High School last week. Speakers at the conference were: Senator Hunter B. Andrews (D-Hampton) Chair, Senate Finance Committee; Mrs. Delores Delaney, member of the Board of Directors of the Virginia Congress of Parents and Teachers; and Madeline Wade, President, Virginia Education Association.

The Virginia system of state aid makes no significant provision for the costs incurred by local school divisions to build, maintain, or repair schools. Consequently, there is wide disparity in Virginia in the quality and condition of the physical plants and facilities where Virginia children attend school. As one school official stated, "The best work of classroom teachers can be compromised by inadequate facilities." One system in

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

Fire Prevention Week is this week, October 4-10. Please read and follow these fire safety tips so your family will be safe from the threat of fire.

Cigarette smokers must follow some basic rules if you are going to smoke inside the home. Try not to smoke in the bedrooms because of the types of combustibles so abundant in this room. Cotton sheets, carpet, curtains all will ignite quickly. Also people will have a tendency to fall asleep while they finish their last cigarette for the day. Always use large ashtrays and dump them into the toilet, not in the trash can.

Fire safety precautions

Never use gasoline as a paint brush cleaner or solvent. The gasoline vapors are very volatile and can explode with the smallest spark. Use only approved paint thinners and cleaners.

During the winter months, use your portable space heaters in a safe manner. Do not use the space heater as a primary source of heat. This puts an abnormal strain on the unit. The unit should be equipped with an emergency cutoff switch if the heater is knocked over. Keep loose clothing such as night gowns and robes away from the heater. Also keep small children and animals away from the heater.

Install smoke detectors in your home and maintain these units. This is the single most important fire safety measure one could take. Smoke detectors save lives. Place the detector on the ceiling away from air vents in the hallway of your home. The detector must separate the bedrooms from the rest of the house. Try to purchase a detector for every room. Test the battery every month by placing a cotton ball in an ash tray, light it and let the smoke drift into the sensing chamber. The alarm will cut off seconds after you remove the smoke. A new battery once a year is mandatory.

Please consider practicing a fire escape plan in your home. If the smoke detector sounds during the night, roll out of bed to the floor. Crawl to the bedroom door, and feel if the door is warm. If it is not warm, slowly open it and check for smoke. If there is no smoke, then leave the house by way of the planned escape route. If the door is warm or there is smoke in the hallway, keep the bedroom door closed and escape out the window or use an alternate exit.

Have all family members gather at a pre-determined meeting place outside your home, well away from the fire building. Never go back inside once you leave the house. Have one family member go next door to a neighbor's house to call the Fire Department. When the Fire Department arrives, tell the firefighters that everyone is out of the home.

The emergency phone number for Police-Fire-Rescue in Virginia Beach is 911. When calling, give your name, address, type of problem and your phone number.

Fire Prevention week lasts only one week. But all Virginia Beach residents must think and practice fire safety all year long. Drop by any fire station in Virginia Beach and visit with your professional firefighters. Free literature on Fire Safety is available. Think Fire Safety-your life may depend on it.

Lake Smith homes come under scrutiny

Something is going on in the Lake Smith area which Councilman John L. Perry doesn't like.

He told City Council Monday at a work session that he thought something could be done about it and some Council members agreed.

The area, which was zoned before the city had a comprehensive zoning ordinance, has been sprouting homes which, Perry said, fill most of the lot. He pointed out that the city has some restrictions on how much of a lot can be occupied by a house. He said the pre-CZO, 30-foot lots are being purchased by a Norfolk developer who is "putting those box cars in." He wanted to know why some people are permitted to do this while others are not.

Councilman Harold Heischberger said that the Lake Smith lots were recorded in 1920 and are not standard lots. He suggested the staff get together with Perry to see what can be done. "They're conforming to the law...a terrible looking thing."

Of the developer, Perry said, "he's going all through Lake Smith and buying single lots and putting those box cars in."

"There's got to be some way" to stop the development, said Councilwoman Reba McClannan. "They look like double-stacked trailers with yellow siding," said Councilman John D. Moss.

Mayor Robert G. Jones instructed City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck to return next week with the problem and the options.

Muehlenbeck said that the zoning ordinance limits lot coverage in the R-8 zoning category to 40 percent of the lot and his information is that the Lake Smith lot coverage is 29.2 percent and 34.6 percent of the lots.

Perry said that was hard to believe when the lots are only 90 feet long and the houses are 60 feet deep.

Not content to while away the long, hot days of summer, over 125 military dependent children participated in a summer reading program and contest sponsored by the library at the Naval Air Station Oceana (NAS Oceana) in Virginia Beach. The program's goal was to encourage the children to read and keep skills sharp over the summer vacation.

Each week during the ten-week session, three different programs were presented for children 4-13 years old. Programs featured films, booktalks, storytelling, and reading aloud.

The children kept reading logs and received a sticker for each book read. Those reading twelve or more books were designated "Top Reader" and received "Top Reader" buttons.

The four children who read the most books, Jamie Harris, Natalie Capps, Casey Taylor, and Molly Capps, received "Top Reader" T-shirts and were escorted to the Naval Air Station Oceana flight line to meet with Commander Dale Snodgrass, the

Despite the huge tracts of land now unavailable to the area's hunters, there is still some great hunting left in the Virginia Beach-Chesapeake area. Both Pender and Evans say that the dove, quail and squirrel populations are still thriving.

Parties were hosted at the library for all groups on the final day of the program.

In the helpless position that many area hunters now find themselves it is wise to keep a good perspective on things.

The far-seeing Spruill does; "With the amount of people moving in here it's obvious that development will occur. Hunting has to make room for this development. I just wish the developers would care a little more for the animals."

INTERSTATE ROUTE 64

CITIES OF NORFOLK AND VIRGINIA BEACH

A Location and Design Public Hearing will be held by representatives of the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) on Wednesday, October 28, 1987, at 7:30 P.M., in the Lake Taylor Senior High School Auditorium at 1384 Kempville Road, in Norfolk.

The purpose of this Public Hearing will be to consider the proposed location and design of reversible bus/high occupancy vehicle (HOV) lanes in the median of Interstate Route 64 from 0.37 mile west of Granby Street (in Norfolk) to 0.81 mile east of Indian River Road (in Virginia Beach).

Also under consideration will be a proposed Commuter Parking Lot adjacent to the Indian River Road interchange. The Commuter Lot would be located north of Indian River Road, between Bean Drive and the I-64 ramp.

All interested parties are urged to attend and give the Department the benefit of their comments and suggestions relative to the proposed highway improvements.

Maps, drawings, an environmental assessment, and other information are available for public review and copying in the VDOT District Office at 1700 Main Street in Suffolk, and in its Resident Office at the intersection of Route 13 (Military Highway) and Route 168 in Chesapeake.

Representatives of VDOT will be present at the Lake Taylor Senior High School Auditorium from 4:00 to 8:00 P.M. on Tuesday, October 27 to informally review and discuss the proposed projects with interested citizens. All interested persons are encouraged to review the proposals prior to the formal hearing.

Written statements and other exhibits relative to the proposed project may be presented in place of, or in addition to, oral statements at the hearing. Such written statements and exhibits may also be submitted to the Department at any time within ten days after the public hearing.

At this location and design public hearing, relocation assistance programs and tentative schedules for right of way acquisition and construction will also be discussed.

passport, which would prevent elementary students from becoming secondary pupils until they passed a test showing they could read and write.

Stallings, a tough advocate on criminals, wants to make a jail sentence of at least 10 days mandatory for anyone caught breaking and entering.

"Breaking and entering is up 37 percent," Stallings said. "With a minimum jail term we might save 25 percent of those arrested from becoming repeat offenders."

Canada also points to its effectiveness in getting laws passed against drunk drivers, drug paraphernalia and look-alike drugs as well as child pornography, which included the seizing of equipment such as cameras used in the latter.

Stallings would like to see a substance abuse program in the schools beginning in the fifth grade.

The Democratic challenger calls Canada's drug, pornography and drunk driving legislation "Reader's Digest issues." "Those are easy issues," Stallings said. "Everyone is concerned about things like that."

Canada says he feels the election will boil down to whether or not the voters want someone with experience or not. He has been going "door to door" every day and is "cautiously optimistic."

Canada's legislative efforts in his 16 years produced over 300 bills that are now laws, he said.

One of those was "the pop-top law."

That's the one where those ring-top openers on cans used to pull off and be thrown away, winding up being responsible for many a cut foot as well as dead fish which resulted when the fish ingested the tops.

Stallings is a supporter of higher salaries for Beach teachers in order to attract and keep good educators.

Both candidates support preservation of our natural resources such as the Chesapeake Bay and Back Bay.

Stallings, a former assistant commonwealth's attorney, said "I want the job and I know I can beat him (Canada)."

He said he was given considerable support in his initial thoughts about opposing Canada by Gov. Gerald Baliles as well as former Gov. Charles Robb.

On the subject of campaign budgets, Stallings said he expects to spend about $135,000. Approximately $60,000 of that amount has already been spent, mostly on ads, with another $60,000 in the bank. He added he will probably raise another $15,000 and claims he has only put in $5,000 of his own money to the campaign in addition to out-of-pocket expenses such as gas.

Stallings expects to spend it all and said the figure of $135,000 was the amount that he figured it would take to beat Canada.

Canada has a budget of $100,000, "none of it out of my pocket," his opponent stated, who added "we're right on target, budget-wise."

Asked if he planned to use a seat in the State Senate as a stepping-stone to national politics, Stallings was quick to reply, "I have no intention of leaving Virginia Beach. I have a wife and two young daughters, 2 and 3½ years old here."

Canada, who down plays a poll taken of the Democratically-controlled state Senate that says he isn't effective, points instead to a state-wide poll of media across the state, ranking him 13th of the 40 Senators.

He is proud of his roll call in 16 years in Richmond, having missed just nine times for a better than 99 per cent attendance figure.

Stallings, who serves as a Commissioner on the Virginia Commission on Public Beaches, having been appointed by former Gov. Robb in 1982, has only attended three meetings in four years.

According to Canada, the VCB meets about four or five times a year, so Stallings' record isn't very good.

North Beach Civic League meets Oct. 13

The North Virginia Beach Civic League meeting will be held Tuesday, Oct. 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the A.R.E. auditorium, 67th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

Navy man loves his work

When Navy Chief Hospital Corpsman Edward O. Rainey, Jr., joined the Navy in 1962, he followed in the footsteps of patriotic men and women throughout U.S. history. It's unlikely Rainey ever thought he would be assigned to an historic "footprint!"

But Rainey, who serves at the U.S. Navy Support Facility on this island, dubbed the "Footprint of Freedom," said he's glad it happened.

Rainey is married to the former Odessa Anders. They have three children, and currently reside in Virginia Beach.

The tiny British Indian Ocean Territory of Diego Garcia is remotely located in the north-central Indian Ocean. It was discovered about the year 1500 by Portuguese explorers, subsequently was claimed by the French, and finally came under British rule in 1814 as a result of the Napoleonic Wars.

Previously used for coconut oil production, the island today is a hub of activity for U.S. Navy telecommunications, oceanographic research, port facilities and logistical support for 7th Fleet aircraft carrier battle groups.

The 1957 graduate of Benjamin High School, Rochester, N.Y., currently serves as administrative chief for Diego Garcia's hospital facility. Rainey, who is also a CPR instructor said of his job, "I love it! I think the thing that is most satisfying is seeing that smile on someone's face saying 'Thanks, Doc!' After they've been helped. In a way, I feel that my job is the most important in the Navy because we save lives, cure illnesses, and relieve pain and suffering. These factors are most important to morale and efficiency."

Navy hospital corpsman assist medical professionals in providing health care to service personnel and their families. They may function as pharmacy technicians, medical technicians, food service personnel and nurses' aides. Hospital corpsmen also assist physicians, serve as battlefield medics and serve in other categories of health-related fields.

Thus far in his Navy career Rainey has visited many exotic places, including: Spain, England, Turkey, the continents of Africa and South America, Japan, China, Australia, Vietnam and the Caribbean.

City captures three Municipal League awards

The City received three awards last week from the Virginia Municipal League. The Effective Government Achievement Award was given to the city's "I Am A City" educational program and the Environmental Quality Achievement Award was given to the Yard Debris Trailer Program. A certificate of merit was awarded by the league's Public Affairs Network to the city for its Citizen Awareness Campaign.

Designed to introduce third and fourth grade students to the organization and operation of city government, "I Am A City" includes a field trip to City Hall, a video production, a 17-page workbook/coloring book, and a lesson on city government.

The City's Public Information Office developed and instituted the program which helps instill a sense of community pride and commitment in the 1,000 to 1,500 students who participate annually.

Teachers who are interested in the program should contact the Public Information Office at 427-4111. Teachers who are unable to bring their classes to City Hall can borrow the video tape from the educational media center and can receive workbooks upon request.

Virginia Beach's Public Works, Solid Waste Management Division won the Environmental Quality Achievement Award for its Yard Debris Trailer Program.

Developed in response to increasing demand for refuse collection, the program serves up to 200 residents per month. Citizens dispose of landscaping debris too bulky for regular collection in a trailer that is delivered free of charge to their home. The trailer is picked up the following day for disposal of its contents.

The program greatly reduces workload on refuse collection field crews and costs considerably less than regular refuse collection services. Yards and streets stay cleaner, complaints have decreased, and citizens appreciate the availability of the service.

Citizens may take advantage of the program by calling the Department of Public Works, Solid Waste Management Division at 427-4201.

The City's Public Information Office also won a certificate of merit for its Citizen Awareness Campaign. The three-part campaign includes a package of printed citizens services publications, a full-color annual report, and a videotape annual report.

The citizens services publication package contains a series of printed directories of city services. Location maps, a telephone guide, a newcomer's guide, a speakers bureau, a city council directory and a general citizen services brochure provide residents with a wealth of information about the city. A new guide to services for senior citizens has recently been added to the package.

The videotape annual report is broadcast periodically on the municipal cable channel 29. The printed annual report and the publications packages are available from the public information office at the Municipal Center.

Judges for the competition were Clifton McCleskey, chair of the Woodrow Wilson Department of Government & Foreign Affairs at the University of Virginia, Stuart Connock, secretary of finance for the state of Virginia, and Edward Brower, retired town manager of Warren, N.J. Carmen Foster, vice president of public affairs for the Metro Richmond Chamber of Commerce, who since the judging has been appointed assistant to the city manager for public information in Richmond, and John Burke, manager of government relations for the James River Corp. assisted in judging the communications entries.

Vice Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that many major banks have contributed to something like this.

Barrett said the committee discussed fund raising at great length but since the committee included all volunteers, it did not feel capable of the required professional effort.

The committee felt, he said, that since the city was giving its own birthday party, it could be expected to provide the money.

McClanahan said that the committee should have some permanent source of evidence of the celebration.

Barrett replied a history is being compiled.

The Jan. 9 date was selected because it's the only date available at the Pavilion until late June and prior to the General Assembly session. State officials will be invited to the event.

Councilman Robert Fentress pointed out that Centennial understood that it does its job on a first class basis. He moved to place the appropriation on next Monday's agenda. He pointed out that Hampton and Memphis provided $250,000 for their celebrations. "We have a committee waiting for us to do something and we need to do something."

Voting against the motion were Councilwoman Barbara Henley, Councilman John D. Moss and Vice Mayor Meyera Oberndorf.

Moss also asked to see a budget next week.

McClanahan also wants to see how much of the cost of the banquet would be defrayed by the charge.

Fentress said that tickets sales alone would bring in $50,000. Henley pointed out that the School Board has appropriated another $25,000 for the celebration.

Councilwoman Nancy Parker said that she wanted it clearly understood that the Council would not be asked for the $65,000 if it is not raised privately.

Mayor Robert G. Jones said that he would like to know the cost of the dinner and how much the public would be subsidizing a "lavish celebration."

Dam Neck Road hearing slated

The City of Virginia Beach will hold a public workshop session and combined location/design public hearing for the construction of Dam Neck Road, a four lane, divided parkway, between Holland Road and General Booth Boulevard.

The workshop and hearing will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 14, at the Birdneck Elementary School Gymnasium, 957 South Birdneck Road. The workshop will be held at 7 p.m., and the hearing at 8 p.m.

Proposed project plans will be available for review and representatives from the City Engineer's Office, the City's Construction Management Engineer, Sverdrup Corporation and Langley and McDonald, design consultant for the project will be in attendance to answer your questions.

For further information, contact Steven A. Shedd, Sverdrup Corporation, 2809 South Lynnhaven Road, Suite 125, Virginia Beach, Virginia, 23452, telephone 463-2026.

Boardwalk bid awarded

McKenzie Construction Corporation has been awarded the contract for the first phase of the Boardwalk Revitalization and Oceanfront Connector Parks projects for $1,066,300, the low bid of three. The projects include improvements to 11 blocks of the boardwalk (10th-14th, 19th-22nd, and 29th-33rd Streets) and four connector parks (3rd, 7th, 22nd, and 37th Streets).

The engineer's estimate for the construction was $960,167.

The boardwalk improvements will provide seating, planting and decorative paving adjacent to the boardwalk.

City Council Monday also awarded the contract for water installation in Kempsville Colony to A&W Contractors, Inc., for $27,196.70, the low bid of nine.

The $20,603.30 difference between the low bid and the engineer's estimate is mostly due to the difference in the cost for pavement replacement.

Auto

It also seems the car was wrecked before I bought it, although I was, of course, not told that. Also, whoever put it back together did a rather poor job, the reason a lot of things aren't right on it.

I even got an attorney to try and get out of the original deal, before the engine went, but was stuck.

I've come to hate this car and the dealer, who no doubt knew what he was selling.

My next automobile will be what I want, and from a [hopefully] reputable dealer that isn't out to "stick it to you."

So the next time you come up behind someone who isn't going as fast as they should, remember, it may not be their fault.

Contel to offer stock to public

Contel Cellular Inc., a subsidiary of Contel Corporation, has filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission to offer shares of its common stock to the public.

The registration statement covers 7,500,000 shares of Contel Cellular Class A Common Stock, with an estimated initial public offering price of $17.00 to $19.00 per share. It is expected that 6,000,000 shares will be sold domestically and 1,500,000 will be sold internationally. An additional 1,250,000 shares of Class A Common Stock are subject to sale upon exercise of an over-allotment option. The offering is being co-managed by Drexel Burnham Lambert Incorporated and Salomon Brothers Inc.

The offering, which will be made only by means of a prospectus, is expected to be completed in late October. Upon completion of the offering, Contel Corporation will retain controlling interest in Contel Cellular through its ownership of 42,500,000 shares of Class B Common Stock. The two classes of common stock are essentially identical with the exception of voting rights. Holders of Class A Common Stock are entitled to one vote per share and the holders of Class B Common Stock are entitled to five votes per share.

Contel Cellular is a division of Contel's Telephone Operations Sector. Through its subsidiaries or partnerships, Contel Cellular provides or will provide cellular service in 30 Metropolitan Statistical Areas ("MSA") throughout the United States. The company's interests in cellular telephone systems represent approximately 11.5 million "pops", approximately 5.5 million of which are located in California and Virginia. "Pops" means the 1986 population of an MSA multiplied by Contel Cellular's percentage ownership interest in the entity licensed by the FCC to construct or operate a cellular telephone system in the MSA.

Contel Cellular operates as the general partner in Richmond, Norfolk, and Hampton Roads, Mobile, Alabama; El Paso, Texas; and Fresno, Visalia and Bakersfield, California. The company is also a limited partner in 11 other U.S. cities, including Washington, D.C., Los Angeles, and San Francisco.

Contel, a company with $3 billion in revenues and sales, provides a broad range of telecommunications and information processing products and services through four sectors: Telephone Operations, Business Systems, Federal Systems and Information Systems.

Beach gets $20 K for litter control

Lynn G. Hudson, Commissioner of the Virginia Division of Litter Control and Recycling, announced that monetary grants totaling $65,488 have been awarded locally for litter control programs, with Virginia Beach receiving the largest amount, $20,105.

Every Virginia city, county and incorporated town is eligible to receive litter control grants, as authorized by the Litter Control Act of 1976. Funds may be used for salaries and wages for operating a litter control program, also for litter receptacles, safety equipment, awards, and educational materials such as films and slide programs.

Many of the state's 280 litter control programs operate under The Virginia Plan: A Model Program to Prevent Littering, which the Division developed in 1979. The Division of Litter Control and Recycling became a part of the Virginia Department of Waste Management effective July 1 of this year.

Authority, taxing power for elected school board explained

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

If Virginia Beach voters, in a referendum on Nov. 3, approve an elected school board, City Council will propose a bill adopted unanimously Monday afternoon to the General Assembly.

The bill outlines the composition of the board and how that body should raise money to run the schools.

Among the provisions are:
• The board shall have no authority to borrow money unless authorized by the voters in a referendum. However, the board shall be entitled to 35 percent of the city's annual bonding authority which does not require voter approval. Referendums would be held only on the date of the general election in November.

• The board would be given limited authority to levy taxes on real estate within the city which is also taxed by the city. The board's levied share of the tax rate would be limited to 60 percent of the total real estate tax. The rate would be based on the city rate in effect prior to an increase by the board.

Under other provisions of the proposed bill:

• No appointments would be made by Council extending beyond June 30, to allow for the election of the school board that year.

• The chairman would be elected to a four-year term.

• At the May 1992 election, one board member from Blackwater, Princess Anne and Virginia Beach would be elected to four-year terms and one board member from Bayside, Kempville, Lynnhaven and Pungo for two-year terms. Thereafter all board members and the chairman shall be elected to four-year terms.

• At the May 1992 election, the at-large board member receiving the largest number of votes will serve for four years and the two remaining members shall serve for two years.

The vice chairman will be elected by the School Board for a two-year term.

Councilman John D. Moss recommended the proposed bill

Croshaw, Hughes address issues facing the community

By Ed Meyers

With all the issues facing the candidates and the upcoming Nov. 3 election just weeks away, most people seem to know where each candidate stands.

And one's profession is generally the least thought of item when it comes to choosing who one might cast their vote for.

But in the 81st District House contest, where incumbent freshman delegate Glenn Croshaw is being challenged by Republican Darrel Hughes, the latter has apparently found a new way of getting some support.

"People tell me they're glad I'm not a lawyer," Hughes said, indicating some voters find it refreshing a businessman is running for the legislature.

Hughes is owner of Virginia Builders, Inc., a heavy utility contractor and industrial developer in Virginia Beach.

Croshaw is a partner in the legal firm of Lyle, Siegal, Drescher and Croshaw, in the resort city.

Croshaw, elected in a special election to fill the seat of Owen Pickett who was elected to Congress, has consistently fought to do away with the HOV lanes.

"Croshaw picks an easy subject," Hughes said. "Who does like them?"

Admitting he doesn't care for the HOV lanes himself, Hughes cites the fact that enforcement to keep illegal riders can only be done by the State Police, and "we don't have enough manpower. They have more to do than they can do now."

Hughes is particularly adamant about what he sees as a "job swapping" situation. That revolves around how commissioners are appointed.

Currently, commissioners are appointed by judges, who in turn are appointed by legislators. Commissioners receive a fee for every daily civil contract closed, which according to Hughes, goes into their pockets. He points out there are no restraints on some of the fees, allowing commissioners to charge what they wish.

Hughes proposes making commissioners state employees and forwarding their fees to our state treasury. "I am opposed to the common Democrat practice of holding a commissioner job while a member of the General Assembly," he said.

Croshaw said "the race will boil down to whether or not the voters feel I have done a good job."

He cited five areas of importance to him, such as, accessibility, integrity, financial disclosure, determination and competence.

The incumbent went door-to-door last year and is doing the same this campaign. He opened a local legislative office, resigned as a commissioner of accounts, gave full financial disclosure, and has, in his words "always been a hard worker."

As a staunch foe of the HOV lanes, Croshaw said that "60 percent of the traffic heading out-bound in the evenings exit the Virginia Beach Expressway before the toll booth."

Virginia Beach Election '87

He said if the HOV system isn't changed, "people will be frustrated until the full system is put into effect." By the early 1990's, HOV lanes are scheduled to be in place all the way to the naval base exit in Norfolk.

Croshaw suggested having a microchip installed on cars and it would register each time motorists went through a toll booth. Then at the end of the month, motorists would receive a bill. Or, possibly, have a sticker on the car that would enable it to use the toll road as much as wanted for a flat fee.

Both candidates said lowering the HOV occupancy to two persons in a vehicle would go a long way toward helping the traffic situation. They are also strongly in favor of letting the voters decide if they want a state lottery. While Croshaw is also in favor of the lottery itself, saying "it's a voluntary tax," Hughes stated he didn't intend to play it if it passes.

Money-wise, Hughes said too much was, and is being spent.

"Croshaw spent $85,000 for 2971 votes last year. That's an average of $45 a vote," Hughes said.

The Republican said he had a $35,000 budget for the race, and has spent about $20,000 thus far, $10,000 of which was a personal loan. He anticipates raising another $15,000.

Croshaw, who had budgeted $55,000 for his reelection, has $20,000 leftover from his first campaign. He has spent about $35,000 of that sum and said he hasn't invested any of his own money.

"The first time I loaned $10,000 to the campaign," Croshaw said, but he since has repaid it.

Croshaw, who also added that he supports stronger education for Virginia in the way of higher teacher salaries, as well as better sewage and development practices around the Chesapeake Bay, offered no solution in terms of raising the money.

Hughes has attacked the Democrats for continually raising taxes, especially Gov. Gerald Baliles, who has initiated tax hikes five times with two more planned after promising during his election campaign not to do so.

Moss objects to material supporting bond referendum

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Councilman John D. Moss has strongly objected to the preparation of material by the city staff supporting the charter bond referendum which will be on the Nov. 3 ballot.

While the cost, $600, is nominal, he said Monday during the City Council session, he said he took major exception to statements in the material which had been prepared for public consumption.

He said the information does not represent all sides of the issue although he had understood that Council had decided not to take sides on the issue.

Councilman Harold Heischberger, who had requested the material and is the prime supporter of increased borrowing authority for the city, said that he would not dignify Moss's comments with a reply.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck explained his position in the affair, saying that "staff walks a very delicate line in trying to be responsive to the governing body, when the staff is asked to enumerate what are to be the advantages (or the disadvantages)." He said that in preparing the information the staff was performing services for the Council. "I don't think the information was put together with any other idea in mind. We try to watch that very carefully." He offered to have the staff

Probation-Parole works with people who need help

By Ed Meyers

For those of you who think their job is confining, perhaps you should have the job Randy Plante has.

It involves keeping people within certain confines.

Plante, 30, is a probation-parole officer with the Department of Corrections for the Commonwealth of Virginia.

It seems when one thinks of probation, one thinks of juvenile offenders. But Plante handles adults, people who are out there in the everyday world, working for the most part, perhaps in the same building you do.

Officers have a broad and in-depth knowledge involving criminal justice, social work and general psychology. Most have years of experience as counselors and social workers as well as law enforcement.

Plante, a native of Newport, R.I., moved to Norfolk when he was 10 years old as his father was in the Navy.

Educated for the most part in the Norfolk city schools, his family moved his senior year and he wound up graduating from Kempville High School in 1975. Working nights, he completed his education with a Bachelor of Science degree in Criminal Justice from ODU in 1985.

He wanted a job in the human services field, so he went to work with the Virginia Department of Corrections as a corrections officer at St. Brides Correctional Center in Chesapeake at the age of 19.

At that age, Plante was the youngest officer in the Commonwealth, having just turned 19 at the time.

"I wanted to work with people who needed help and I found it exciting," Plante explained.

At St. Brides he worked with officers who were at least 15 years older than him.

"At my age, some of the inmates tried to use me," Plante said. "Some of them were former teammates when I went to school in Norfolk."

At the time, St. Brides had an inmate population of 175, whereas it now houses 500.

Plante, who works out of the District 23 Office on Witthuck Road, is one of 12 officers responsible for the supervision of 560 probationers and 162 parolees. There are also two officers doing special case handling. They are the intensive supervision officer, who handles cases needing a high degree of supervision and a parole specialist, who has a caseload of about 35 parolees who need more than normal assistance reintegrating back into society. There are also four investigative officers.

Each district office has a chief probation, and parole officer responsible for the overall operation, with the officers appointed by the Circuit Court judges. They serve as sworn officers of the court with certain supervisory and arrest powers sanctioned by the Code of Virginia and Department of Corrections guidelines.

According to Plante, when a person is arrested on a felony charge, they are processed through the judicial system. If found guilty following a trial, there are many options available to a judge for sentencing which include fines, good behavior, jail time, penitentiary time and supervised probation. Quite often the sentence includes a combination of these options.

The Adult Community Corrections Officer, such as Plante, becomes involved once the person is ordered into a supervised status. The probation may begin the day of sentencing, after some jail time

Referendums again on ballot

In addition to electing representatives for the legislature in Richmond, the upcoming Nov. 3 election will have several other items on the ballot, some of them asking voters to spend more money. But isn't everyone, so why should that make any difference?

While all the referendums receive about the same publicity, probably the one that will generate the most interest is the one concerning the resort city's roads.

Voters will be asked to decide if the city should borrow $8 million a year for the next 10 years to construct and maintain roads.

The General Assembly last year granted the city that borrowing authority, but the City Council has refused to use it unless voters approve it in a referendum.

Recreation centers will again be on the ballot after being defeated in 1986.

Voters will be asked if the city should borrow (and spend) $32.85 million to build three new recreation centers in Great Neck, Princess Anne and Bayside as well as expanding the existing one at Bow Creek.

A proposal to build a center in the Great Neck area was soundly defeated last year.

The proposed new rec centers would raise the real estate tax by 3.8 cents per $100 of assessed value. If you own (or are paying for) a house worth $100,000, it would cost you another $38 per year.

Another referendum asks if the city should elect its School Board with limited taxing power, but fails to define "limited."

Trees also make the ballot, asking the public to decide if the city should require the preservation or replacement of trees in new developments.

The fifth referendum asks if the city should change its annual borrowing limit. Currently the limit is the amount of debt incurred the previous year plus $10 million.

Voters will be asked to decide if the city should borrow $8 million a year for the next 10 years to construct and maintain roads.

One member of the City Council wants the limit to be one-quarter of one percent of the city's total assessed land value. That would, in effect, raise the debt limit.

For example, this year, that would make the limit $33 million compared to the current limit of approximately $25 million.

One thing the city doesn't plan to do is spend a lot of money to promote the referendums, with only about $2,400 slated for printing costs for the rec center issue.

In previous years the city has spent as much as $75,000 to promote bond referendums, that amount being budgeted in 1985. Last year $20,000 was spent.

Not only on the local ballot, but a statewide question, is the lottery referendum, which will decide whether or not the voters of the Commonwealth of Virginia are in favor of a state-run lottery. There are currently 21 other states that have their own lottery system.

Getting to the candidates, who will help spend the money, there are three in the 8th Senate District race, with state Sen. A. Joe Canada Jr. a Republican, being opposed by Independent Louis M. Pace and Democrat Moody E. "Sonny" Stallings Jr.

The 7th Senate District seat, currently held by Democrat Clarence A. Holland, is being contested by Independent Rae H. LeSene.

Del. Glenn R. Croshaw, a Democrat elected to the 81st District House seat last year in a special election to replace Owen B. Pickett, who was elected to Congress, finds himself opposed by Republican Darrel J. Hughes.

Del. H.R. "Bob" Purkey, a Republican, is unopposed for the 82nd District seat and Democrat J.W. "Billy" O'Brien is unopposed for the 83rd House District seat.

Likewise, Glenn B. McClanan, Democrat, has no opposition for the 84th House District seat and Republican Robert Tata is unopposed in the 85th House District.

J. Curtis Fruit, a Republican, has no opposition for another term as clerk of the Circuit Court. - E.M.

Resident lauds Canada's record

Editor:

Much has been said about effectiveness of our Senators and representatives at all levels of government, but little is said about the criteria used to make these evaluations. The only criteria which is completely unbiased is whether or not the elected representative is there when the vote is taken. At that point in time every lawmaker who is present is equal and those who are not there are failing the mandate of the people they represent. It is the impact of the Law being made that counts, not who authored it. Attaching a lawmaker's name to a bill is pure self-gratification and of no consequence to the citizen who is affected by the passage or defeat of the bill.

Senator Joe Canada's record on that score is hard to beat. In 16 years... he has missed less than once a year being there when a vote is taken. Whether you are a Republican, Democrat, or Independent you can rest assured that your input to him will have an influence on his thinking in resolving the issues. His opponent's attendance record in public office is abysmal.

One can only wonder why Moody Stallings was selected by his party, especially in the light of the recent remarks of Senator A.L. Philpott in Roanoke to the effect that the spoils belong to the victor and therefore you should vote for a Democrat. Where does this leave "We The People?" "We The People" are the ones who are supposed to be represented, not party leaders. The sad stories of single dominant parties range from the ineffectiveness of the system in Mexico to the tragic pages of history. It can happen in our Commonwealth as it has in too many of our United States.

"We The People" in Virginia deserve better. First re-elect Senator Canada, a man who will be there when the vote on the bills is taken. Second keep abreast of all legislation under consideration in Richmond. Third let your representatives know exactly how you feel about the issues and why. Fourth insist that the media tell the whole truth and stop slanting information by innuendo.

HOV lanes need more traffic

The HOV lanes which almost everyone dislikes have come to my attention lately.

Until recently, I was hardly ever involved in the rush-hour traffic, and it seemed when I was, I was usually headed in the opposite direction.

I have observed, with humor sometimes, that some people avoid the lanes, even when they could use them. For instance, you are supposed to have three people in a vehicle between the hours of 6 and 9 a.m. when you are headed inbound. And from 3 to 6 p.m. heading outbound on the Virginia Beach Expressway.

But I see drivers who for some reason don't use it when they could. If it's after the rush-hour, or if they're headed the opposite direction, like outbound in the morning.

I've been wondering if there couldn't be something worked out to allow vehicles in the HOV lane without three people if they were traveling all the way inbound or outbound?

I see many people who use the inbound lane without the required number of riders, but notice that a lot of these vehicles also get off at the Chesapeake exit and head out I-64.

The drivers (both male and female) who cut in front of you without signaling really burn me. The sad part is they don't realize how dangerous their antics are.

If vehicles without three riders who intend to travel the entire HOV lane in the morning and evening were allowed to use it, I'm sure it would help the traffic situation, if it could be monitored properly.

That would also help prevent some accidents as you wouldn't have people getting in the HOV lane for just a mile or two and then cut all the way over to their exit.

This all may be too confusing for police to regulate, but it might be worth considering.

Anything to help the traffic congestion should be worth looking into.

I'd also be in favor of tokens for use at the toll booth.

I had a friend who recently wound up in exact change lane by accident and the only had tickets. The attendant on duty (the lane had been changed during a rush) noticed her scrambling to find a quarter and waved her through to avoid any more of a slowdown than there already was.

I found myself almost getting a ticket one morning in the HOV lane. I had gone through the toll booth in the extreme left lane and my car, which doesn't go as fast as it should, didn't have the acceleration to get back over into a slower lane after paying my quarter. Then the traffic was backed up and I couldn't get out of the HOV lane. I wound up passing a state trooper who was waiting for people riding illegally and he waved me over, but then took off after someone else who refused to stop when he signaled.

Incidentally, my car, which I told you about last week, hasn't improved any. In fact, I had to get a new battery after getting up and finding the old one dead.

No offense to women drivers is meant, but I've noticed several who drive like there's no tomorrow. And it seems I observe more ladies(?) driving recklessly than men. For some

Partners in learning

Sharing experience for parents and teachers

Let's Talk

By Rob Jones
President
Virginia Beach
Education Assoc.

One of the highlights of the year for the Virginia Beach Education Association is the upcoming "Partners in Learning" Conference on October 29 at Plaza Junior High. Beginning at 7 p.m. and continuing until 8:30 p.m., discussion leaders will facilitate dialogue in three, 30-minute concurrent sessions. Topics to be discussed will include:

- How to engage in productive dialogue between parents and teachers;
- Developing academic skills in reading, math and English;
- Understanding the process of testing and how to make the most use of test results;
- How to use the services of school counselors;
- Understanding the role of the school nurse;
- Substance abuse by school-age children, the signs to look for, and what to do when you see them;

•The Appalacia Educational Laboratory: What it is and how it benefits us.

This conference is a wonderful opportunity for parents and teachers to share their ideas and their concerns in order to achieve what we all want — a quality education for each and every child in Virginia Beach. Most parents, at one time or another, have expressed frustration over the lack of expected performance by their children in school.

Getting a definitive answer out of a child about school is, in itself, a major accomplishment by some parents. Once they have the answer, the chances are the answer only creates more questions and frustrations. What happens between the bubbly and exciting early years of a child's education and the later years, which often reflect an indifferent, maybe sullen attitude, or even one of rebellion and hostility?

You may be part of the problem by simply not knowing what is available for you to use to help your child early enough. Nearly all lines of remedy begin with the teacher. Knowing how to get the most out of a parent/teacher conference may be the only boost you will need in understanding the problems your child is having. If you need more ideas, several Teachers of the Year will be present to facilitate discussion on study skills in math, English, and reading. Many parents are reluctant to talk to a counselor because they don't understand the counselor's role. This may be your chance to talk to a counselor in a generic role and learn how you can make productive use of his or her services.

Gary Blumenstein, Instruction Chair for the VBEA and a social studies teacher at Kemps Landing School, strongly encourages parents and teachers to come to this conference and learn from one another, in an informal setting, a little more about accomplishing a satisfactory educational effort for our children. "More often than not, a little honest dialogue will dispel many of the frustrations and negative perceptions that tend to crop up when children are not doing well in school. This seminar offers an opportunity for parents and teachers to become truly, partners in learning."

Remember, PARTNERS IN LEARNING, October 29, Plaza Junior High, 3080 S. Lynnhaven Road from 7 until 8:30 p.m. Put it on your calendar and plan to come.

Lynnhaven Jr. H.S. honored as "one of the best" in U.S.

By Ed Meyers

The resort city's finest, Lynnhaven Junior High School, was honored by the U.S. Department of Education last week as one of the best schools in the country.

The "Celebration of Excellence" saw Gary Temple, deputy secretary of education for Virginia, present the award to principal George E. McGovern on behalf of the USDE. The school's 1,220 students as well as 111 teachers and staff gathered in front of the school to participate in the celebration and award presentation. Also on hand were approximately 700 proud parents.

Congressman Owen B. Pickett, Virginia Beach Mayor Robert G. Jones and School Board Chairman James N. Fletcher gave congratulatory remarks after which Dr. James E. Melvin, superintendent of schools, delivered the keynote address.

McGovern praised his teaching staff as "outstanding," saying the award was a result of an awful lot of community involvement. "The kids here are expected to achieve and the teachers care about each other as well as the students. I'd put my staff up against any in the country," McGovern stated.

The official notification had come earlier in the month when McGovern received a telephone call from the USDE. Last Monday, Oct. 5, McGovern was among representatives from the other 270 outstanding schools

"The kids here are expected to achieve and the teachers care about each other as well as the students. I'd put my staff up against any in the country," McGovern stated.

named in the recognition program at ceremonies in the White House Rose Garden with President Ronald Reagan.

"You are here because your schools are part of what's right with American education," said the president. "Schools like yours are showing the country how to achieve excellence by setting high standards, maintaining discipline and emphasizing the basics. The credit belongs to administrators who provided leadership, parents who got involved, teachers who inspired, and students who studied."

The school's award consisted of a plaque as well as a flag of excellence which will fly over the school.

Now in its fifth year, the USDE's school recognition program is based upon characteristics that contribute to school effectiveness and student success.

Schools nominated in the program are scrutinized for 14 attributes of successful schools and seven indicators of accomplishment.

The 14 attributes were: clear academic goals, high expectations for students, order, discipline and freedom from drug use, rewards and incentives for students, regular and frequent monitoring of student progress, development of good character and values, teacher input and staff development, rewards and incentives for teachers, concentration on academic learning, positive school climate, administrative leadership, well-articulated curriculum, evaluation for instruction improvement and community support and involvement.

The seven indicators of accomplishment are: student performance on standard achievement tests, student performance on minimum competency tests, student success in high school or post-secondary education, attendance rates for both students and teachers and student suspensions and other exclusions, dropout rates, awards for outstanding school programs and teaching, and student awards in academic or vocational competition.

Secretary of Education William J. Bennett, in commenting on the program said, "Each year we recognize additional exemplary schools. We stand once again for the idea that educational excellence is within reach — not just for the lucky few, but for all schools, in all communities, with people who care and are willing to work for it."

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

Virginia Beach professional firefighters are among the highest trained in the Tidewater area. These firefighters are fortunate to have a $750,000 facility in the 900 block of South Birdneck Road to make training a lot easier.

This facility was occupied in May of 1979 and consists of administrative offices, two large classrooms and an auditorium all within the main building. Also within the main building is a library with an inventory of approximately 3,500 items that is managed by Linda Allen who has been employed at the fire training center since it opened.

A separate concrete smoke house building is located on the grounds and can withstand 2,000 degree temperatures and is used to simulate house fire conditions. A large lake used for pumper operations is also on the 6.5 acres.

In the earlier '70's, the professional firefighters did not have any fire training facilities at all. One of the first fire training schools was held at the Vocational Technical Center on North Landing Road. The next several fire schools were held at a fire station number 16 on South Plaza Trail. The last several classes before the opening of the Birdneck Road facility were held at the Camp Pendleton fire station off General Booth Blvd.

The staff of the Fire Training

Center consists of District Fire Chief James Kellam, Captain William Lloyd and Captain R. B. Alley. There are several fire instructors that are responsible for teaching the firefighters new firefighting methods. Fire instructors Mark Johnson, Kurt Nellis and David Cook handle this enormous task. The secretarial staff plays a major role in keeping the Fire Training Center running smoothly and they are Toni McChesney, Linda Allen and Pat Allen.

Drop by and visit the Fire Training Center and ask for a tour of this facility. See where your Virginia Beach professional firefighters receive their training so that they may become more efficient when coming to your aid. Think fire safety and test your smoke detector monthly.

Mosquitos are all in a day's work

By Jeri Guarracino
Public Information Office
City of Virginia Beach

Ask Phil Meekins what he did at work today and he's likely to tell you that he counted mosquitos as they landed on him. Or he might say he collected samples from a truck as it sprayed a dense chemical fog. At the very least he spent his day categorizing and studying those pesky irritants known as mosquitos.

Phil Meekins is a Biologist for the Virginia Beach Mosquito Control Commissions. His job is to monitor larvae and adult mosquito populations that plague the city.

There are two ways to monitor mosquitos and neither is very much fun. The first method is the New Jersey light trap. The traps are strategically placed around the Lynnhaven District. A sensor turns on a light when it is dark. When a mosquito flies towards the light a fan pulls it down into a box. Meekins periodically empties the box and brings the samples back to his laboratory.

The light trap and landing rate test may seem simple but they are successful and have been around since the 1940's. The light trap test helps Meekins determine what kind of mosquito is prominent in a specific area. Considering there are 50 different species common to the state and 15-20 around the Hampton Roads area this is no easy task.

The landing rate test goes a step further. Meekins explained, "Let's say you check the lamp and there are 1000 mosquitos. You might panic at the high number when actually a lot of them might not even be attracted to people." That's where the landing rate test comes in.

Checking the landing rate of mosquitos is exactly what it sounds like. Meekins stands still in the middle of a suspected problem area for a few minutes and lets mosquitos land on him.

Moss

prepare information on disadvantages, but Moss declined saying that he had understood it was the city's position not to take sides. He said that the material prepared by the staff would be perceived as an endorsement by Council.

The ballot question asks voters whether or not the City Charter should be changed to limit the amount of general obligation debt City Council can issue each year to one-fourth of one percent of the assessed value of taxable real estate in the city. The present charter provision allows Council to issue in a calendar year no more than $10 million plus the amount of principal on outstanding debt retired during the year. Another provision allows Council to issue in a calendar year an additional $8 million for highway purposes provided 20 percent of the amount in the previous provision is spent for highway purposes. The latter provision has never been used because it was not approved by the citizens in a referendum.

Moss objected to a graph which shows the city's present bond authority because, he said, it does not take into consideration the effect rollover allowances have on overall spending.

He took issue with the statement that the present limit restricts the flexibility of the elected representatives beyond that

As the mosquitos feast on the front of his body Meekins counts and pulls them off. At the same time his assistant counts and removes them from his back. On a recent trip it was determined that 22 mosquitos per minute landed on the biologist.

Meekins passes his findings on to a crew whose job is to control the mosquitos using three different procedures. Source reduction, getting rid of the standing water where mosquitos breed, is a year-round job and the most economical and efficient way to fight the population. The second step is larvicide which consists of putting a chemical, harmful only to mosquitos, into the unremovable water. Meekins refers to the third method, spraying or adulticide, as the "last ditch effort." The most visible of the three methods, it is the least effective and most expensive. It is necessary, however, to combat adult mosquitos since it is impossible to remove or treat all standing water where mosquitos hatch.

Meekins and the crew at the Mosquito Control Commission fight a year-long battle. Although mosquitos are very weather oriented there is no definite season. "For example," Meekins said, "during the summer of 1985 there was a semi-drought and no water for mosquitos to breed. Later that year when hurricane Gloria hit we had a huge outbreak of saltwater marsh mosquitos."

Meekins pointed out that mosquitos eggs which freeze during the winter thaw unharmed in the spring. To get rid of the frozen eggs crews regrade, clear and create ditches during the winter months.

The mosquito control crew is always ready to handle any outbreak that comes its way. As for Meekins, don't be surprised if you see him standing perfectly still in a swarm of mosquitos the rest of us are avoiding. After all, it's all in a day's work.

which was intended when the charter was amended in 1974. He said that was a judgment call.

Concerning a statement that under the proposal, the authority to issue bonds would increase as the city's ability to pay debt service increases through the growth in overall real estate assessments, Moss said that the growth in real estate assessments is no indication of the growth in income. The additional borrowing would have to be financed by additional taxes, he said.

He also disagreed with the following conclusions if the charter change were approved:

•The trend in the declining purchasing power of Council's charter authority would be reversed.

•Council would have greater flexibility to satisfy major capital needs through its ability to borrow additional funds on its own authority.

•There should be cost savings on some construction projects because of the ability to begin them sooner. Construction costs often escalate faster than interest rates on bonds or the consumer price index so it is important to have funds to build facilities sooner.

Additional bonding capability may allow Council to address needed capital projects which may be unpopular in a referendum — a jail facility or a needed highway.

Historical Marker Unveiled

J. Davis Reed, president of the Princess Anne County-Virginia Beach Historical Society, and Lillian B. Youell, chairman of Virginia Beach's Constitution's Celebration Commission, unveil an historical marker at the Constitution Day celebration at Pleasant Hall. The marker designates the site of the courthouse built on the site in the 1780s.

Kempville Flag Twirlers

The Kempville High School Band provided musical highlights for the Constitution Day celebration at Pleasant Hall in Virginia Beach.

Beach Constitution Day celebrates bicentennial

Two hundred years ago, the United States Constitution was created to guarantee the rights of the citizens of the United States. Recently, the bicentennial of the historic document was celebrated at Pleasant Hall in Virginia Beach, site of the courthouse which served Princess Anne County in 1787.

A concert by the Kempville High School Band preceded an address by Richard B. Kellam, retired U.S. District Court judge. Kellam discussed the history of the Princess Anne Courthouse which was constructed in the village of Kempville in the mid 1780s.

An historic marker was unveiled by Lillian Youell, chairman of the City of Virginia Beach's Constitution's Celebration Commission, and J. Davis Reed, president of the Princess Anne County/Virginia Beach Historical Society. The marker designates the site of the Princess Anne Courthouse and serves as a remembrance of the City of Virginia Beach's celebration of the Constitution's bicentennial.

Following the ceremony, a walking tour of historic Kempville was led by Dr. Steven Mansfield, Virginia Wesleyan College professor of history who is currently writing a book about Princess Anne County. Earlier that morning, Virginia Beach courts joined a nationwide court recess in celebration of Constitution Day. In Courtroom #1 at the Municipal Center, Judge Kenneth Whitehurst, senior judge of Circuit Court, read a statement reaffirming a commitment to the principles of government created by the Constitution. Lillian Youell, chairman of the City of Virginia Beach's Constitution's Celebration Commission responded to the statement as a representative of the people.

The court recess was sponsored by the Conference of Chief Justices which consists of the highest judicial officers in the country.

Linda Roe
Linda M. Roe has joined the City of Virginia Beach as the new municipal cable coordinator of Clitacable 29. Prior to this position, Roe worked at Newport News CableVision as video production manager and program director. Her new responsibilities at Channel 29 will include programming, City Council meetings, monthly Planning Commission meetings, Wetlands Board and Zoning Board of Appeals public meetings, as well as a monthly call-in show.

Authority

pointing out that the composition of the body would parallel City Council.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley noted that with the tax rate limit of the School Board rate, the Council will still be the ultimate authority in setting taxes. If the School Board needed more than the 60 percent, City Council would have to increase its tax rate.

When voters go to the polls Nov. 3 they will be asked to approve or disapprove an elected School Board with taxing authority. The Council prepared the proposed bill prior to the election so that the voters would know what would be presented to the General Assembly if the vote were favorable.

Pro bowlers rumble through town

There was a noticeable rumble just outside the doors of Indian River Bowling Lanes in Virginia Beach last week. That's because inside this bowling mecca, the women's pro bowler's tour had set up shop. Over the weekend of Oct. 8-11 61 professional women bowlers competed for $50,000 in prize money in the Hammer Eastern Open.

This is the first such tournament for women held in Virginia since 1979, and it's been in the planning stages for 4 years. The preliminary rounds took place last Friday and the finals were televised nationally on ESPN on Saturday.

Earning the $10,000 first place check was Rene Fleming of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, second place and $5,000 went to California's Tish Johnson, while third place and a $3,000 check went to Susan Breda of Alexandria, Minnesota. The top local finisher was Norfolk's Carolyn Cottrell who finished up in tie for 15th.

Bill Vint, director of marketing for the women's tour, was very pleased with the local enthusiasm. "Whenever you have a bowling crowd as large and as nice as this one, it is easy to promote the sport and encourage more women to participate."

Over 600 people attended the televised finals on Saturday.

Local engineers to design new air, space center

Tidewater structural engineers Stroud, Pence and Associates, Ltd. have been commissioned to design the structure for the Virginia Air and Space Center and the Hampton Roads History Center in Old Hampton.

Stroud, Pence and Associates was selected by the Architectural Design team which consists of the New York City firm of Mitchell/Giurgola Architects, internationally renowned for museum design, and Rancorn, Wildman, Krause & Brezinski, of Tabb, Virginia, who have long been one of the leading Architectural firms in the Hampton Roads area.

The city plans for this $20 million, 100,000 square-foot complex to house exhibits from the NASA Langley Visitor Center.

Development of a solid alliance between the building and the Hampton Waterfront District is a fundamental design issue. The design will also address the need for interior and exterior public open space and the vast programmatic requirements of the museum in this context. In support of the theme of technological development and in order to maintain flexibility in the mounting of shows, a dramatic exposed structural system with large clear spans will be used. The museum will indeed be a centerpiece for the development of the Old Hampton area.

The Air and Space History Centers are expected to attract approximately 400,000 visitors a year and to generate at least $2.3 million a year in tourism spending.

Program Supervisor

As program supervisor for performing arts, Tom Magee manages the administrative framework for the Performing Arts unit, including funding, publicity and interdepartmental coordination. In terms of private theatre companies, he acts as the producer. In the hectic world of performing arts management, however, it's not unlikely that you'll catch Magee on performance nights with his sleeves rolled up and a stack of programs or a cast list in his hand. Having worked with the Playhouse since its inception, Magee has played a key role in its growth and prosperity. He credits the program's success to consistently good programming, good production and good talent.

Programming Supervisor

"I would say that one of the greatest contributions I have made is in the area of performing arts classes," said programming supervisor Pam Riley. "When I started working with the program, there were only about 15 classes with 60 to 100 registrants. Now there are between 150 and 200 classes with over 1000 registrants per year." Riley describes her position as much like that of an artistic director. In addition to supervising the youth theatre, she plays a major role in the selection of scripts for upcoming seasons. She also organizes special events and oversees the Arts in the Parks program. The holiday production, "A Christmas Carol," will benefit from Riley's directing skills.

Technical Director

"I take designs and implement them," said Ron Caley of his role in the theatre. Acting as technical director, he either designs the sets and lights himself or designs designs that are submitted to accommodate the facility, the budget, and the available materials. Caley and his assistant Earl Vowell do 85 percent of the actual set construction for Playhouse productions. Caley says he enjoys rounding up props from other places. "With Arsenic and Old Lace, we'll be rummaging around with antique dealers for Victorian furniture." In addition, Caley coordinates the efforts of the technicians and actors and makes sure scenery changes run smoothly during performances.

Production Manager

"Our staff is so small in comparison to a lot of professional companies that we all wear a lot of different hats," said Cameron Dye, theatre supervisor and production manager. A few of his hats include scheduling the theatre for all productions and outside events, making sure the technical end of the productions are timely and run smoothly, acting as a liaison between the technical staff and the directors and outside contractors, overseeing box office sales, and keeping the patrons happy. In addition, you might find him running the lights and sound tapes, designing sets, or building props. "I have a knack for getting things and getting things done," said Dye. The theatre reaps the benefits of his efforts.

Fuel assistance to begin

The City of Virginia Beach will once again provide fuel assistance to needy Virginia Beach residents. Applications for the program will be available at the Virginia Beach Department of Social Services, 3432 Virginia Beach Boulevard, on Nov. 2, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. As in previous years, the client may apply at the agency in person, apply by mail, or have someone apply for them. Fuel benefits will be based on size and income of household as well as primary fuel used. For more information, contact the Department of Social Services at 431-3200.

The Kempsville Playhouse has grown up

By Katherine Martin
City of Virginia Beach
Public Information Office

Back in 1977, the Kempsville Playhouse opened its doors at the Kempsville Recreation Center to a series of plays, performing arts classes and a puppet show or two. Celebrating its 10th anniversary season, the Playhouse now has 90 theatrical productions to its credit. Over 60,000 theatre goers have enjoyed its performances and thousands of actors and actresses have graced its stage. The number of roles has doubled in the past three years, auditions have tripled, 14 of 18 youth productions sold out this year, and class registration is higher than ever.

Plays are just one aspect of the ongoing educational recreation program offered by the Performing Arts unit of the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation. The unit also offers performing arts and dance classes for adults and children, organizes the Arts in the Parks series and provides performance support to city-wide festivals.

The Playhouse is the embodiment of the term "community theatre," drawing on performers and support volunteers from within the community. Cast, seamstresses, ushers, and makeup artists — all come from within the local community.

The Playhouse shares the distinction of having one of only three municipal programs in the state that mounts its own shows. The Performing Arts unit produces and directs all shows for the Playhouse, with five full-time and nine part-time employees to pull it all together.

Scripts are chosen on the basis of wide audience appeal, and are frequently plays that have been made into movies. Not just a recreational outlet for spectators, the Playhouse provides an opportunity for local performers and people interested in technical theatre production to put their talents to use.

Al Chewing, captain with the Virginia Beach Fire Department, started working with the Kempsville Playhouse during last year's One Act Festival. He recently appeared as Henry in two performances of "The Lion in Winter."

"I've been doing shows since high school and have auditioned for commercials and movie roles," said Chewing. "I have to say that the people at the rec center are as professional as any I've worked with. The Kempsville Playhouse offers a real variety of shows . . . comedies, musicals, dramas . . . there is always an opportunity to get involved."

In addition to appealing to seasoned actors, the Kempsville Playhouse also provides novices a chance, either in a production or in a performing arts class.

According to Tom Magee, program supervisor for performing arts, "The Kempsville Playhouse is a real 'grass roots' effort. About 80 percent of our programming is directed toward youth theatre and we work with families' schedules. Our summer drama workshops and youth productions are so popular we have to double cast in some cases. Over 120 girls auditioned for the eight roles in 'Little Women' for example. That was one we double cast, but even then only 16 were chosen."

And the future — Theda Stelmier, a child who performed in "Show Stoppers" in 1978 went on to play Annie on Broadway. Many young people who have been involved with classes or productions at the Playhouse now attend the Governor's Magnet School for performing arts.

While the theatre's patrons and participants have developed a strong sense of pride in the last ten years, local theatre critics have also developed an increasing respect for the productions.

Howard Wornom of the Ledger-Star praised the Playhouse's Elephant Man — "superior acting and a production strong in emotional impact." Charles Taylor of the Virginian-Pilot called Kempsville's Dracula "Community Theatre at its best . . . it's a work of which everyone involved can be proud."

There is always plenty of room for another volunteer to get involved either on stage or behind the scenes. Audition for a role. Volunteer to distribute posters, usher or help solicit donations of goods and services from local merchants.

It won't be long before you'll share the pride felt by the staff, cast and crew who have grown up with the Kempsville Playhouse.

Public invited to 25th anniversary of Norwegian Lady

The public is invited to attend the 25th anniversary ceremony of the Norwegian Lady on Saturday beginning at 12:30 p.m. at the Norwegian Lake Park located at 25th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

His excellency Kjell Eliasen, the Ambassador of Norway, will be honored. On hand will be the Atlantic Fleet Band, which will play the Norwegian and American National Anthems.

Construction contract to Beach firm

Second District Congressman Owen Pickett announced that the Navy has awarded a contract totaling $3,674,312 to the J. B. Denny Company of Virginia Beach for the construction of an exchange and package store at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard in Portsmouth.

According to Pickett, the new 40,000 square foot facility will be an addition to the existing commissary at the shipyard.

He said he was "pleased that the Navy has again turned to the J.B. Denny Company of Virginia Beach to complete a major construction project."

In March, the Navy awarded a $4.6 million contract to the firm for the construction of additional training facilities at Dam Neck.

The J. B. Denny Company was established in 1979. It employs 40 people.

The Virginia Beach borough fire department and members of the high school ROTC units will act as color guards.

Mayor Robert Jones will represent the city, along with Mrs. Nancy Long of the Jr. Women's Club, Jim Dobbins, former director of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce-Virginia Beach, Nicholas Marino of the Moss, Norway Sister City committee and Kay Pollard, volunteer director of the Hampton Roads International Visitors Association.

The Jr. Women's Club will host a reception for the Ambassador at Sajo Farm at 2:30 p.m.

Wildfowl exhibit opens at museum

The Virginia Atlantic Flyway Art Exhibit opens Oct. 16 at the Virginia Marine Science Museum.

The show in the museum's Changing Exhibits Gallery will feature paintings of Virginia's migratory waterfowl, all by Virginia artists. It will hang through December 1.

Among the local artists showing are Maria Morando and Leland Simmons of Virginia Beach; Jan Southard and Mark Hartung of Chesapeake and Al Foca of Norfolk.

The museum at 717 General Booth Boulevard is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Chamber's After Hours October 22

the Southport Business Park. Guests will be able to see several buildings completed by viuharr Development, two under construction, and three more sites to be completed next year.

"The 32,000 square foot Trade Center Building provides extremely flexible space as in-

Committee must have all $600,000 by December 31

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The 24th Street Oceanfront Park Committee has been given a second chance to come up with its share of the purchase price of not quite six-tenths of an acre of oceanfront land at the end of 24th Street.

City council Monday by a 6-4 vote adopted an ordinance agreeing to pay $1.8 million toward the purchase price of the property provided that the committee raise the remaining $600,000 toward the purchase price by Dec. 31.

The committee had originally been given a Sept. 1 deadline to raise the money which it failed to meet. The council refused to extend the deadline by a vote of 6-5.

With the property owners agreeing to lop off $150,000 of the price, the committee's responsibility will be to raise $450,000. The committee has raised $252,000 of which $43,000

Manager moving?

City Manager Thomas Muehlenbeck is considering becoming the city manager of Plano, Texas, a quickly growing Dallas suburb. He has been in Virginia Beach for 5 1/2 years. Council members say they don't want him to go but would understand if a man of his ability is lured back to a state where he and his wife both have ties.

The Kellam High School student, of the 900 block of Clubhouse Road, was also charged with two counts of burglary with the intent to commit rape and one count of aggravated sexual battery.

Lake Christopher residents were dealt a setback by the city's planning commission when it gave its approval by an 8 to 2 vote for new residential development. Local residents say they will continue to address the situation.

Golfers/businessmen prepare for tourney

$5,500 was raised at the "First Annual Benefit Golf Tournament, Say No To Drugs," held recently at Stumpy Lake Golf Course off Indian River Road.

Proceeds went to Chesapeake General Hospital's Substance Abuse Program and Unit. The winning team in the Florida best ball event, the law firm of Lyle, Siegle, Drescher and Croshaw, received $400. Participating high schools included Deep Creek, Western Branch and Indian River, which finished in fourth and donated their winnings to the hospital.

Tournament organizers expect the golf tournament to be an annual event.

Lottery, YES

A lottery could be operating in the Old Dominion by early next year if Virginians approve the referendum Nov. 3. The exact wording of the question on the ballot: "Shall the 1987 Act of the General Assembly which establishes a state-operated lottery in Virginia become effective?" This is NOT an advisory referendum. If it passes, the lottery will go into effect.

Earlier this year, lawmakers in Richmond voted 68-32 in the House of Delegates and 24-15 in the Senate to have a referendum. Most legislators, however, personally oppose the lottery. Most Virginians, however, want a lottery. Surveys have consistently shown a lottery is favored by a margin of more than 2-to-1. This support comes from all regions as well as all income, racial, religious and age groups. That's why the legislators refused to decide the issue, preferring to leave it up to the voters.

The lottery seems to be a plan of action whose time has come. Twenty-seven states plus the District of Columbia already have lotteries. And each of the 23 states that do not have a lottery, with the possible exception of Utah, is considering initiating one. Even the federal government is studying proposals for the creation of a national lottery. A consistent 60 percent of the U.S. population favors lotteries.

Why the clamor for lotteries? That's easy. Lotteries raise money for the state to be used for projects such as education, health and social services. And it is done voluntarily. If you don't want to play, you don't have to. Proponents say this is better than increasing taxes that everybody has to pay.

How much money for Virginia? According to a study by the Senate Finance Committee, a Virginia lottery will produce $200 million without raising a penny in taxes. It will keep lottery revenue in Virginia rather than Maryland, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Maryland officials estimated that 30 percent of the participants in their lottery are Virginians. Many of the hottest-selling areas for the new West Virginia lottery are along the Virginia border. And the three top winners in the 3-year-old Washington, D.C. lottery have been from Virginia.

Opponents say a lottery will fuel illegal gambling and other crimes. The Virginia State Lodge of the Fraternal Order of Police, representing 6,500 working police officers, doesn't think so. The organization has endorsed the lottery.

Opponents say the poor will play the lottery in disproportionate numbers. The Senate Finance Committee says the average lottery expenditure per person will be $2.38 a week. And surveys show that the majority of players are middle-income, $18,000 to $34,000 a year.

The fact is that a state-run lottery is a proven method of raising revenue for better government without raising taxes. Not one of the 27 states already operating a lottery has terminated the game. Just the opposite — it's full speed ahead everywhere.

Thomas Jefferson said a lottery is a "wonderful thing, it is taxation on the willing." Tom was wrong. It is not taxation. Wonderful is arguable. But it is voluntary and it will keep Virginia money in Virginia for worthwhile projects of benefit to the Commonwealth. The referendum deserves a YES vote. — H.B.

Health

Low fat diets can be harmful to children

Many Virginia Beach residents have recently become aware of the health benefits of a diet low in fat. High fat diets have been associated with increased risk of stroke, heart attack and cancer. But many people also assume that if a low fat diet is good for an adult, it must also be good for children, including young infants. According to a new booklet from the American Institute for Cancer Research that could be a serious mistake.

The American Institute for Cancer Research notes that while adults should limit fat in their diets, fat is an essential dietary element for developing children. Attempting to restrict dietary fat for children under 18 months of age, by limiting them to skim milk or low fat solid foods, may result in babies not getting the fat necessary for normal development of their brains and nervous systems.

The Institute's new booklet, "Infant Nutrition: Sound Eating Habits Start Early," provides basic information on sound nutrition for young children. It notes that babies who are either breast fed or bottle fed on a regular formula will get sufficient amounts of dietary fat for normal development. Problems occur when parents attempt to limit the baby's diet to the low or no fat foods they themselves are eating.

The Institute notes that as a baby is switched over to solid foods it is important to begin teaching the child positive eating habits. This includes providing a broad variety of foods, with a special emphasis on fresh fruits and vegetables. It is also a good time to limit sweets. Although even newborn babies seem to be born liking sweets, studies have indicated that what the baby is fed during the first year may influence his taste for sweets later on.

The American Institute for Cancer Research is a national, nonprofit organization which focuses on the relationship between diet and cancer. Through its Dietary Guidelines for Lower Cancer Risk, the Institute has recommended that adults lower their dietary fat intake from the current average of 40 percent of calories to 30 percent or less. It has published "Infant Nutrition" to help make parents more aware of the proper nutritional standards which should apply for children and which can be different from those for adults.

A free copy of "Infant Nutrition" may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business size envelope to the American Institute of Cancer Research, Dept. IN9, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Letters to the Editor

Media accountability

Editor:

In 1873, Mark Twain said of newspapers, "The newspaper is a tremendous power. It can make or mar any man's reputation. It has perfect freedom to call the best man in the land a fraud and a thief, and he is destroyed beyond help." This century old truth is magnified many fold today in light of AP's, UPI's, radio, newspapers, and the chief offender, television.

The awesome power of the media today shapes and defines public opinion, and is the direct and proximate cause of men's political fortune, for good or bad. It brings down presidential aspirants like Gary Hart, launders the transgressions of Jim and Tammy Bakker, hammers away at Presidential error, erases cheaters like Sen. Biden, nit picks at Robertson, and utterly destroys undeserving men, like Judge Bork.

Its army of editorialist, newsmen, and TV news reporters have the capability of gathering, writing, printing, publishing, distributing and airing news with or without taint. Today, unremarkable remarks, from undisclosed sources, make headlines, to the detriment of good men, and no requirement of confirmation is made of the newspaper or TV commentator. The media can best be described as tale-bearers, who daily alter the truth in order to curry favor or impugn the spoken word of important people. Courts require testimony to be corroborated, the Bible says, "Out of the mouths of two or three, let everything be established," and common sense requires some accountability of the media.

During the French Revolution people were so desensitized to the continuing daily execution of the Aristocracy, by the Populace, that the bored "Knitting Women" just nodded and counted as the guillotine decapitated French Nobility. Today, the same lethargy that was peculiar to those watching women is present, as we watch heads roll on a national level, in America.

The media, from the daily newspapers to Ted Koppel's Nightline helps motivate and determine public opinion. The media is not servant to politics, and ongoing national events, but rather calls the shots, by carefully selecting its targets. The media is in a position of control, and is therefore able to decapitate targeted individuals without accounting to anyone. As David Halberstam, an ex-New York Times reporter has written, they are "The Powers That Be." Our reaction to the daily rise and fall of men in politics and position is "ho hum, there goes another one." The "Knitting Women" counted, we simply turn off the 6 o'clock news or chuck the daily newspaper, giving absolutely no thought to what we have seen or read. The commentary or report is accepted as gospel and media reporting continues to go unchecked.

Our blind acceptance of media reporting has given free reign to both newspaper and TV. The media's implied duty to report the news honestly, in a careful, concise, and clear manner has gone unchecked for too long.

New media controls the airwaves and printed word, and yet is fully protected by our Constitution's First Amendment. It has the capability of making evil appear good, and good appear evil. What then is the answer?

Man climbs mountains, goes to outer space, navigates the seas, builds empires, and attempts to overcome all obstacles, while searching for the truth, and yet steadfastly refuses to look for the hand of the Lord in what he does. He seldom stops to examine his motives and responsibility to others. He never looks within himself. It is past time for men and women of the media to examine their motives, and responsibility to the public, for the continuing benefit of all, and grace to good men.

History 101 revisited

"What is history but a fable agreed upon?"

— Napoleon Bonaparte.

Everyone has studied history in grade school and we all know that Washington was first and Lincoln was sixteenth. But are we all absolutely sure that what the history books tell us is true?

How do we really know if it was Paul Revere galloping around Boston on that cold winter night in 1776, and not some drunk patriot yelling "The taverns have closed, the taverns have closed." We will never actually know just exactly how things happened hundreds of years ago. With the amount of prejudice and bias that goes into many of our supposedly factual textbooks these days, it is nearly impossible to get an objective view of many historical events.

So rather than accept some questionable interpretations I've decided to rewrite the history books on my own and call it Spector's abridged-encyclopedia of world history.

Here are some important facts to remember:

Chapter I — The beginning of the world.

*The world began when the man in the moon asked God for a place to swim.

*The first living organism on the new planet was Tip O'Neill. He will also be the last.

*Man appeared when women found it impossible to torment the animals.

*Dinosaurs became extinct because of the household hazardous waste that the cave people kept throwing out their cave openings.

Chapter II, The Dark Ages.

*King Arthur did not slay dragons and rescue damsels in distress, but rather was a foul-mouthed dictator that walked in the rear while the troops fought a pitched battle.

*There were no class struggles between the serfs and landlords — just conflicts over who got to be in the Robin Hood movies.

*The church hierarchy did not rule European society, but the burgermeister of the Lowenbrau brewery in Munich did.

*The Dark Ages ended with the onset of the Renaissance, and began again with the establishment of the Klan.

Chapter III — The Age of Enlightenment and Discovery.

*The enlightenment began when the burgermeisters in Munich invented the Friday afternoon "happy hour."

*The first person to discover the new world was neither Columbus nor Captain John Smith, but surveyors for a Hampton Roads developer.

*Voltaire and all the other great French thinkers were conspirators in a giant opium, i.e., their monopoly of the Parisian masses caused the French Revolution.

*The printing press was first used to develop the prototype of "penthouse" magazine; a local female heretic was on the first cover.

*Russia awakes from its monolithic slumber only to hit the snooze button and doze blissfully for another 200 years.

Chapter IV — The Age of Industrialization and Modernization.

*The first modern factory with efficient assembly line processing was not The Chesapeake Post newspaper.

*Serfdom was abolished in Europe at the same time slavery surfaced in America. (Just a neat little historical coincidence.)

*The telephone was discovered by bothersome telemarketing firms.

*The first minimum wage was arrived at by taking the king's waist size, dividing by the number of people in his country, and dropping the last two zeros.

*America developed the first navy in order to import German beer.

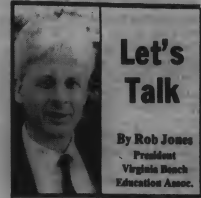

Chapter V — The Twentieth Century.

*America crushed Mexico in 1848, opening the door for Texas to become a state, and giving thousands of illegal aliens a hope for the future.

Question asks more than you might think

Let's Talk

By Rob Jones
President
Virginia Beach
Education Assoc.

City Council decided on Oct. 12 the wording of the Elected School Board question on which we will be voting Nov. 3. Many voters will think that they will be voting to advise on the following question, "Should we elect our school board?"

The question actually before the voters is much more complicated and involves two parts. The first part of the question is the one you expect, "Should we elect our school board?" The referendum also includes the concept of an elected chairperson for the school board. I feel confident that most voters are ready to address this question.

The second question is, "Should the revenues of the school system be limited to 67% of the real estate tax revenues, 35% of the charter bond revenues, and 5% of other revenues?" I don't think most voters are ready for this question, and frankly, I don't think the average voter will know what he is being asked to decide.

If you have a MBA with training in school finance and feel able to handle the question above, throw in the facts that the schools currently receive 68% of real estate revenues and that the city will continue to pay debt services on obligations secured before 1992.

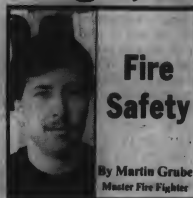

I am an English teacher with graduate training in school finance. My training and my knowledge of school finance has been enhanced by attending many local and state budget sessions. I have received extensive training on school finance from the Virginia Education Association. The question posed is too tough for me to handle in the three weeks between the time Council decided on the funding aspects of the question and the time I must vote.

Although I believe our city has been served well by the present city council, I feel that the manner in which the elected school board referendum has been handled leaves much to be desired. If the referendum passes, and I believe it will, the council should take the results as a public position on the concept of elected school boards. The success of the question should be followed by informed dialogue between the council and the public regarding the financing of our schools and the taxing authority of the proposed elected school board. The timing of the development of the proposal before the voters precludes an informed dialogue before election day.

Our present School Board is serving our city and our schools in an exemplary manner. When you consider this fact, it is hard to understand why such a complicated question should be presented to the public on Oct. 12 when the voting is to take place on Nov. 3.

Put leaves in plastic bags, don't burn them

Fire Safety

By Martin Grube
Master Fire Fighter

Cooler weather has arrived in Virginia Beach and the leaves are turning colors of orange, red and yellow.

These leaves have provided shade all summer long and now autumn has a way of providing us with a spectacular display of colors weeks before the leaves loosen their grips and float silently to the ground. They will lie until they are raked up and disposed of.

"So Martin, what's that got to do with the burning of leaves?"

readers may wonder.

I just wanted to give you something to think about before you burned all those leaves in your yard.

Every year during autumn, hundreds of Virginia Beach residents rake the leaves in their yards and burn them. Many times the homeowners leave the fires unattended or winds are too strong and the Virginia Beach Fire Department responds in one of its big fire trucks.

In 1986 alone, there were 589 brush fires and 159 rubbish fires in our city. Not all of these fire calls were leaf burning complaints, but do show the high number of small fires within our city. Please follow the safety tips listed below if you decide to burn your leaves this year. The firefighters do frown on this practice because of the risks involved and they would like to suggest the homeowner to use plastic bags for disposal of dead leaves.

•You are permitted to burn only leaves, small twigs and small branches.

•No burning of leaves in winds above 15 miles per hour.

•No burning of leaves in city streets or in ditches.

•No more than one pile of leaves burning at one time and no larger than four feet in diameter.

•Never leave the pile unattended and have a garden hose at the site.

•The pile must not be closer than 50 feet from a structure and the homeowner is liable for all damages if a fire was due to negligence.

The Virginia Beach City Council has enacted a nuisance law that requires fires to be extinguished if a hazard to your neighbors.

Please do your professional firefighter a favor. Use plastic bags to dispose of your leaves. Think fire safety and visit your nearest fire station and ask for a pamphlet on fire safety.

Final motor vehicle access rule concerning Back Bay published

Final regulations concerning public access, use, and recreation on the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge in Virginia have been published in the Federal Register, Refuge Manager Anthony D. Leger recently announced.

The regulations, by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, include rules for vehicular access as well as general recreational uses. These regulations were finalized after a 60-day public comment period during which 44 comments were received. The published rules replace those which have been in effect since 1983.

Regulations on public use and recreation were revised slightly to require a permit for groups exceeding 10 individuals and to address seasonal beach closures and emphasis on wildlife oriented activities. Changes and redefinitions for motor vehicle access permit holders include:

•Procedures to implement the December 1986 GAO Audit are specified.

•Public utility waiver permits may be issued to permanent outer banks residents who meet specified criteria. Additional medical access waivers will not be issued after December 31, 1987.

•Business employees are required to provide specified appropriate documentation which verifies their employment status.

•Essential commercial service vehicles are granted access for business calls, Monday - Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

•24 hour day access is permitted from Oct. 1 through April 30.

•Towing, transporting, or operating vehicles owned by non-permit holders is specifically prohibited.

•Public utility vehicles require a permit.

•Continuous or recurring use of the refuge beach by military, fire, or emergency vehicles for other than emergency purposes shall require a permit.

A copy of the Final Rule is available for public review at the Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, 4005 Sandpiper Road, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23456 or, upon request, at most local libraries.

Higher interest rates panic market

Wall Street

By George T. Staggs

The stock market went from beauty to beast once again. The young prince was turned back into a frog by the triple curse of higher interest rates, negative forecasts from famous gurus and devilish program selling.

It is very difficult, at this point to say that last week's scare tactics were the same as the market has used over and over again this year. Ten of the thirteenth largest one-day declines have occurred this year and each set-back was followed by some terrific buying opportunities.

So far it's been a safe bet that the more vicious the correction, the more likely it's a bull market set-back than anything more substantial. This time, however, the fear and psychological damage run so deep, the chance of any

Virginia Beach 4-H program becoming more urban oriented

By Katherine Martin
City of Virginia Beach
Public Information Office
The 4-H club traditionally brings to mind images of corn, cooking contests and blue ribbon pigs. And rightfully so. The roots of 4-H and much of its current strength lies in these areas of interest.

The 4-H Office in the City of Virginia Beach, however, tries hard to change this perception. Through the years, 4-H has grown and expanded, changing from a predominantly rural club to one comprised of 80% urban youth. The organization now offers an increasingly wide range of activities, from scuba diving to computers to shooting safety, and a little bit of everything in between.

In addition to offering over 100 different interest areas for the 6,000 4-H members in Virginia Beach to pursue, the office recently broadened the scope again, sponsoring a two-day Marine Camp for handicapped youth.

According to Virginia Beach 4-H Extension Agent, Joe Hofferberger, "4-H is a lot more than just cooking and cows. One of our goals is to reach out to youth in Virginia Beach who, because of certain disabilities, are unable to participate in the programs offered to the general public. By offering special programs to our disabled youth, we hope to eventually mainstream them into our regular 4-H activities."

The 4-H Marine Camp in Virginia Beach was a pilot program, designed to provide a testing ground for future marine camps for the disabled. The ultimate goal of the program is to offer a week-long resident marine camp for disabled youth, either here in Virginia Beach or at the 4-H Center in Jamestown, within the next three years.

Sponsored by the Virginia Beach 4-H Office, Virginia State University and the National Science Foundation, the recent two-day camp gave organizers an opportunity to analyze the obstacles that would be involved and test activities for feasibility and interest. In addition to Joe Hofferberger of the City of Virginia Beach's Department of Agriculture, Barry Fox, Extension Specialist in 4-H Marine Education with Virginia State University, Pat Orr, a Marine Science teacher in Virginia Beach and a host of energetic volunteers made the program possible.

The two-day camp provided youth a hands-on outdoor learning experience with activities relating to the coastal environment. Day One began at the Back Bay Wildlife Refuge where a herd of wild horses, a flock of pelicans and a school of porpoise were on hand to welcome the campers. With the help of leaders and volunteers, the kids participated in activities ranging from a micro-hike using magnifying glasses to search the beach for shells and treasures, to a series of tests to analyze salt levels, to experiments using a sieve to explore the composition of the sand and water.

Leaders also pulled a huge seining net into the waves, coming back with a skate and thousands of sand fleas. The campers were delighted, poking and prodding the specimen, and scooping handfuls of sand fleas back into the sea.

Day Two featured a tour of the Virginia Marine Science Museum in Virginia Beach, followed by a lesson in basic seafood preparation. The 4-Hers learned how to pick crab, shell shrimp and shuck oysters. Naturally, tasting the results was a highlight of the day.

Marine Camp participants were chosen from a group of disabled youth currently enrolled in the 4-H horseback riding program for the disabled. Hofferberger explained that "since this program was experimental in nature, we chose kids from a group that we already knew. We knew what disabilities to expect and were able to prepare for them. The Marine Camp was an ideal opportunity to involve these kids in another program."

After completion of the program, evaluations pronounced it an excellent learning experience for everyone concerned. Campers learned about the marine environment, and the 4-H volunteer teen leaders gained valuable skills in dealing with handicapped people. Organizers of the program were able to analyze the results and begin making improvements for next year's camp.

"This is the first Marine Camp for handicapped kids in the state," said Hofferberger. "We try to do innovative programs here in Virginia Beach, and by taking the lead, encourage other 4-H groups to try new things as well."

It's this type of new programming that has kept 4-H alive through its 80-year history making it an exciting and fulfilling activity for the kids and volunteers who uphold the values of head, heart, health and hands. And even though 4-H now encompasses everything from computers to cockatoos, there's still plenty of room for the kids who want to learn more about traditional subjects like cooking and cows.

in pledges, and Sheldon Corner, treasurer of the committee, said that the committee probably will have another $150,000 from a contributor leaving approximately $50,000 to raise by Dec. 31.

Said Corner: "This is the last time we will appear before you."

Said John C. Rogers, president of Beach Investment Associates, Inc., owner of the property, "I will not come down anymore."

Rogers also said that he would not lower the price of the property below $2.25 million.

City council refers to the property as the Maritime Museum Open Space so that citizens will not confuse it with a traditional-type park. Some objection had surfaced over the kinds of people who might be attracted to a public park.

The property is located just north of the Maritime Museum which occupies an old Coast Guard Station.

Councilman Harold Heischberger, who has been a supporter of the park from the beginning, said that the matter had been discussed in an executive session. He said Council wants the area to be known as Maritime Museum Open Space rather than a park. City Council would be the ultimate judge on how the property is to be used.

He said it was never intended that the Maritime Museum would dictate the uses of the property.

Mayor's Committee for the disabled awards announced

The Virginia Beach Mayor's Committee for the Disabled has recognized an individual, a business, and an agency for exceptional contributions to local disabled citizens.

Maureen Hollowell was chosen to receive the individual award for her volunteer efforts with the Spina Bifida Association of Tidewater, the Tidewater Association for Hearing Impaired Children, the Special Education Advisory Committee, the Tidewater Coalition for Citizens with Disabilities, and the Board for the Rights of the Disabled.

Hollowell is a full time volunteer and advocate for the rights of disabled citizens.

Leggett Department Store was chosen to receive the award for business contributions to the disabled. The award was based on the store's coordination of a fashion show for the visually handicapped. The "tactile" fashion show was the first of its kind on the East Coast.

The City of Virginia Beach's Mental Retardation/Developmental Disabilities - Infant Stimulation Program was chosen for the agency award. This volunteer program works with children ages birth to two years who have mental and physical handicaps or developmental delays.

The three awards will be presented at the city council meeting on Oct. 26 at 6:45 p.m.

Market

strong rally is remote. If the bull is to recover, it will take some time for any confidence levels to be re-established.

The most important ingredient for any recovery will be seen in a stabilization of interest rates, accompanied by a firmer dollar as compared to the Japanese yen and further improvement in the balance of trade figures. In regard to the latter, it is interesting to note that the trade deficit has improved over the past two monthly reports, but apparently not to the satisfaction of the marketplace.

I think the worst thing portfolio managers and investors can do now is panic. If past history is any indicator, the worse things look, the more likely the correction is only temporary. Bull market tops are generally accompanied by hallooish choruses in the financial press that herald the dawn of a new era of investment sunshine. That is hardly what we have been seeing lately.

CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH CHARTER AMENDMENT PROPOSAL TO BE VOTED ON AT THE NOVEMBER 3, 1987 GENERAL ELECTION

Pursuant to request of the City Council, the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach has ordered a special election at the November 3, 1987 general election on the question of amending the Charter of the City of Virginia Beach to provide for the direct election of the City's School Board and to grant the elected School Board limited taxing authority. If the question is approved at the election, the General Assembly will be requested to amend the City's Charter accordingly.

The proposed amendment to the Charter is summarized as follows: COMPOSITION AND ELECTION OF THE BOARD: Section 16.02 of the Charter is amended to provide that the term of office of members appointed to the School Board shall not extend beyond June 30, 1992. Section 16.03 is added and provides that effective July 1, 1992 the School Board shall be elected by the voters of the City at large. This section also provides that the elected School Board shall consist of 11 members, including the chairman, 1 member for each borough, to be elected by the voters of the City at large from among the residents of each of the 7 boroughs, and 3 members and the chairman to be elected by and from the City at large. Section 16.04 provides that the first election of School Board members is to be held on the first Tuesday in May, 1992, and the elected members will take office on the first day of July, 1992. Members elected at the first election shall serve staggered terms, with no member serving a term of more than

4 years. After the initial election, all members and the chairman shall be elected for terms of 4 years. Section 16.05 provides that vacancies on the School Board shall be filled for the unexpired term pursuant to a majority vote of the remaining members of the School Board. Section 16.06 provides that any registered and qualified voter of the City who has secured the signature of 125 voters on a petition properly filed and certified shall have his name placed on the ballot for election to the School Board. Any candidate seeking to represent a specific borough must physically reside in such borough. Section 16.07 provides that the responsibilities and duties of the chairman shall be as provided by general law. Section 16.08 provides that the vice-chairman shall be elected by the majority of the members of the School Board and shall serve a term of 2 years. BORROWING AUTHORITY: Section 16.09 provides that the School Board is authorized to issue bonds in an amount equal to 35% of the City's annual bonding authority, which, pursuant to § 6.05(1) of the Charter, does not require voter approval. The School Board shall have no additional authority to borrow money unless approved by the voters in a referendum. Should the School Board fail to exercise any or all of its annual entitlement to issue such bonds without voter approval, the remainder of the School Board's entitlement shall not be exercised or otherwise used by the City Council. No more than 15% of the School Board's total annual operating budget for a given fiscal year may be expended on debt service, and no issued bonded debt shall mature in excess of 25 years. TAXING AUTHORITY: Section 16.10 provides that the School Board is authorized to levy taxes on taxable real estate within the city as a distinct and separate political subdivision. The School Board's function as concerns such taxation shall be limited to the establishment of a percentage of the total tax rate applicable to real estate. The tax rate established by the School Board shall not exceed 60% of the total tax rate. The total tax rate is comprised of the rate established by the School Board added to the rate established by the City Council. The School Board shall have no authority concerning the valuation of real estate, billing or collection of taxes. The School Board shall establish its tax rate for the 1993 tax year on or before June 15, 1993, to become effective on July 1, 1993. Prior to July 1, 1993, funding for education shall be as provided by general law. Section 16.11 provides that the School Board shall receive 5% of all revenues raised and realized from all sources of taxes, exclusive of real estate taxes, levied by the City. This section also provides that the City shall have no responsibility for funding public education other than as specified herein and in the preceding section, and shall become effective on July 1, 1993. HOUSE KEEPING PROVISIONS: Section 16.12 provides that in the event the Charter amendment conflicts with general statutes the Charter shall prevail. Section 16.13 provides that in the event that any part, section, provision, sentence, clause or phrase contained in Chapter 16 of the Charter is adjudged invalid, the remainder of the Chapter shall remain in effect and unimpaired. ## Dinner among council members. She suggested, said Mayor Robert G. Jones Monday, that the dinner be eliminated and the city go along with the rest of the program.

Although the dinner charge was to be $25 a person, the cost per person would come to $35 for the approximately 2,000 expected to attend.

"My thought," said Councilwoman Reba McClanahan who voted against the appropriation, was "this ought not be handled as something that costs money." She said that many people who will participate don't expect to be paid. "The thing has gotten a little off course," she said. She added that she wanted the whole committee, not just the executive committee to be consulted.

Jones said that the Committee had been charged with the task without much direction from Council.

McClanahan said that it sounded as though the council had the choice of having all or none of the proposed celebration. "None of us feels that way."

Councilman John A. Baum said he noted a lack of enthusiasm all the way round. "If I were on a committee like that I'd just as soon do something else."

Council decided to reconsider its action of last week next week and to have Councilman John A. Baum and Councilwoman Reba McClanahan work with the Committee.

Ceramics display at arts center

Color and Clay II, a 46-piece juried traveling exhibition of ceramics will be on display Oct. 25 through Nov. 30, at the Virginia Beach Arts Center. Also on exhibition will be pastel drawings by Suzanne Stevens and Polly Perkins. The Color and Clay II exhibition is intended to illustrate the scope of work being done today and will serve as a survey of the broad range of techniques possible in this media.

Curator MaryAnn Fariello organized the first Color and Clay exhibition in 1982. She states that:

"the formal issues of contemporary ceramics grow out of a fusion of the European and Oriental traditions and are primarily concerned with form. Issues regarding color have always appeared secondary due in part to conditions inherent in the handling of the ceramic materials."

"In contrast to the painter who begins to work by choosing colors, the ceramist begins by building a form from clay, the primary material. Traditionally, color is a secondary consideration and in actuality is second in terms of process... There are, however, ceramists that reverse the traditional ceramic process and focus on color as their primary means of expression."

On Friday, Nov. 6 at 9 p.m., MaryAnn Fariello will give a talk on contemporary craft and the works in the Color and Clay II exhibition. The talk is free and open to the public as part of the Arts Center's Fall Lecture Series. A reception will follow.

Curator MaryAnn Fariello has written for Craft International and Art Papers. An accomplished ceramist, Fariello's work is pictured in Sourcebook of Architectural Ornament and has been included in numerous national exhibitions. She is completing requirements for an M.A. in Museum Studies with a concentration in the history of the ap plied arts from Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

Color and Clay will travel to galleries in Winston-Salem, NC; Chicago, IL; Dallas, TX; Mesa, AZ; Detroit, MI; and Daytona Beach, FL.

Color and Clay is partially funded by a grant from the Virginia Commission for the Arts, and was organized by the Hand Workshop.

Concurrently, pastel drawings by Suzanne Stevens and Polly Perkins will be in the Arts Center corridor galleries. Stevens has taught at the Arts Center for over seven years and recently had a work purchased by the Chrysler Museum. Polly Perkins is Curator at the Virginia Living Museum in Newport News. Both artists show a series of landscapes.

Paintings by Anne Iott at TCC

The Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College is presenting a collection of paintings by Anne Iott through Nov. 12 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Pungo Building Gallery.

Bodnar and King

Local resident wins trip to U.S. open

Bettina Bodnar of Virginia Beach, the grand prize winner of the Team Up to Win sweepstakes, recently enjoyed an all expenses-paid trip for four to the U.S. Open Tennis Championships in Flushing Meadow in September.

The Team Up to Win sweepstakes was sponsored by Domino's Pizza, Inc., Domino's Products Division, and Golf Digest/Tennis, Inc. with transportation provided by American Airlines and hotel accommodations at the Sheraton Centre Hotel and Towers.

Bettina (Tina) was accompanied to the U.S. Open finals weekend by her husband, Richard, sister Deborah Smith of Washington, D.C., and friend

Dee Dee DeRooda of Milford, CT.

Tina's single entry was mailed from Milford, and she was notified of her prize only two days before relocating to the resort city. "I was so excited, I couldn't believe it—I've never won anything before," she exclaimed. "We (she and Richard) are avid tennis fans." According to Bodnar, when they are not scuba diving, they are on the courts.

A highlight for the winner and her guests was meeting Billie Jean King, Commissioner for Domino's Pizza Team Tennis. Bodnar expressed her gratitude to the sponsors of the sweepstakes and told King that she and her husband enjoy Domino's Pizza.

Contemporary arts lecture set Oct. 27

Virginia Museum of Fine Arts curator Frederick Brandt, whose specialty is 20th-century art, will speak at the Virginia Beach Arts Center on Tuesday, Oct. 27. His topic will be "Making Friends with Contemporary Art." It is free and open to the public.

The illustrated lecture will be presented at the Arctic Avenue Gallery beginning at 7:30 p.m. Sponsored locally by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, it is one of 19 lectures offered by Virginia Museum curators and educators under the auspices of the museum's statewide chapter and affiliate program.

"Many viewers shun contemporary painting and sculpture because the works are frequently abstract or represent unfamiliar subjects," Brandt says. "Often the works are created in a style that presents unexpected visual challenges. What many viewers don't realize is that contemporary painting and sculpture are rooted in the past and are really a continuation of what was established by the old masters."

Fall disc golf classic

The Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Department is hosting the annual Amateur Disc Golf Classic on Sunday, Oct. 25, at 12:30 p.m. The competition will be held at the Bayville Park Disc Golf Course.

The competition is open to any amateur, avid or first time players. A novice and open division will be offered. All local experts and past City champs must compete in the open division.

Registration fee before Oct. 23 is $5. Day of event registration will be $7. For official entry form and more information call the Disc Golf Classic Coordinator at 471-4884.

Municipal Center features Banks

Virginia Beach artist Betty Banks will display 10 paintings from an expressionistic series titled "Vivid" at the Municipal Center Gallery through Nov. 2. Her mixed media includes oil, watercolor, monotype and gouache on canvas, linen and metal. Banks says of her work, "In my art I seek to infer or question rather than present a pleasing and literal recreation of scene or fact."

The Municipal Gallery is a satellite space for art sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, located in the City Administration Building at North Landing Road and Courthouse Drive. It is free and open to the public and hours are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Banks has exhibited at the Peninsula Fine Arts Center, the Virginia Beach Arts Center and the Hermitage Foundation Museum among others, and recently studied at the Vermont Studio School with Arch Rand, Harmony Hammond and Malcolm Morley. Her work is represented at Wells Gallery in Virginia Beach.

A home should suit owner style

Indeed, there are many attractive features common to existing homes. One of the most basic of these is lower property taxes, because such local facilities as schools, neighborhoods, and shopping centers are already established. Existing houses also may have features like high ceilings, full basements, arched doorways, and solid door that are not often found in new homes.

"Since a home is most likely the largest investment made, it is wise to invest in its upkeep," advises Tolliver. "By conducting regular maintenance today, thousands of dollars can be saved tomorrow." Painting the exterior, replacing damaged roof shingles, cleaning gutters, checking for signs of termites and other pests, and examining the patio, fireplace, sidewalks, and driveway for masonry cracks or tree-root damage can all be helpful in preventing costly repairs later.

"It is important to invest the time and money it takes to make improvements to the home," says Tolliver. "But proper planning is also important. Updating the house, increasing its value and customizing living space can all be done for much less than the cost of a new house."

If the decision is made to enlist the services of a qualified, professional remodeling contractor to redesign or improve the home, the selection will be made easier by following these guidelines:

- Employ one with an established business and reputation. Local firms can be checked through previous customers and the Better Business Bureau. They are tax-paying members of the community and are compelled to perform satisfactory work if they want to survive in business.

- Become familiar with the type of workmanship and quality of materials that will be required for the job.

- Solicit two or three bids for the work and do not blindly accept the lowest. Ask the contractor who submitted it why his bid is so low. Sometimes a higher price may be worth the money.

- Get everything in writing, including what the contractor will and won't do, such as daily cleanup of the premises or cleanup upon completion of the job.

"Think carefully before signing a contract. Read through it a second time. Is everything understandable? Does the commitment for payment include what is really wanted? Is the price fair? If something isn't written into the contract, it probably won't be received. So know all the facts before spending hard-earned money.

"Make sure that the remodeling plans are consistent with the rest of the houses in the neighborhood," says Tolliver.

Finally, it may be necessary to obtain financing for the project. An option is to take out a second mortgage and put that money right back into the house. This may amount to as much as 80 percent of the appraised value of the house, minus the unpaid balance from the original mortgage.

A second option is to refinance the house, which requires paying off the original mortgage and taking out a new and larger loan. If the remodeling project is modest, a personal loan may be required to cover the cost.

A remodeled home should suit the style of the owner.

How popular improvements pay off

If you are considering a remodeling project solely because of the value it will add to your home, Practical Homeowner magazine advises you to think twice. Many common home improvement projects do not return their full costs at resale time.

People remodel their homes for many reasons; for comfort, for added space, for convenience. But Practical Homeowner's Remodeling Survey found that homeowners who hope to recoup their remodeling investments should study the local real estate market, making improvements appropriate to their neighborhood that buyers want and are willing to pay for.

Practical Homeowner polled professional appraisers from across the country on 23 common home improvement projects and found that remodeling paybacks can vary widely from one area of the country to the next. Installing central air conditioning, for instance, would return 199 percent of its cost in Houston, but only 71 percent in Chicago.

After deciding to go ahead with a remodeling project, Practical Homeowner suggests doing as much of the work yourself as possible to save money. Contractors charge an average $3,500 to build a deck, but the cost is just $1,060 if you do the work yourself. And an exterior paint job returns a whopping 1,003 percent of its cost if you do the work.

While regional differences make it impossible to find the "perfect" home improvement, a safe bet would be an interior facelift of new paint, wallpaper, carpet and linoleum, according to the survey.

Wallpapering made easy

Wallpapering can be a forbidding-looking job. However, hanging wallpaper is one of the first do-it-yourself (DIY) tasks homeowners and apartment dwellers tackle after they have mastered painting and caulking.

Getting over the "knowledge barrier" is the biggest step. Wallpapering can be easy if:

- You have some good instructions.
- You have the right tools available;
- You plan ahead and do the job properly.

Among the wallpapering tips offered by the pros are:

- Prepare the wall properly. It pays to take the time to clean the walls thoroughly and repair all cracks before papering.
- Apply paste from the center outward on wallpapers requiring paste.
- Use your smoothing brush and seam roller. Using the smoothing brush will ensure proper adhesion all around; smoothing brushes are different for regular and vinyl wallcoverings. Then roll the seams carefully and remove extra paste squeezed out.

• Trim like the pros. The smart DIYer will allow about 2" of extra paper at the top and bottom at each strip. Then, a broad taping knife or a trim guard with a steel blade can be used to press the wallcovering tightly into the baseboard or corner.

Using a very sharp knife with a fresh blade to trim off excess paper prevents tearing and ensures a straight, professional-looking edge.

Even novice do-it-yourselfers will find the task of wallpapering simplified — and the professional look of a room like this within their abilities.

Blinds offer insulation

Windows are the second largest cause of heat loss in the home. The average home has 12 windows and these windows can contribute significantly to heat loss or gain. This direct relationship is reflected on your utility bill each month. Glass is an excellent heat conductor, while being a poor insulator. Therefore, the key to year 'round energy efficient window decor is balancing personal decorating requirements with sun, view and the patterns of nature.

When selecting venetian blinds and window treatments, several factors should be considered: solar reflectivity, closure, insulation qualities, how the blind treatment will fit the window and air circulation within the room.

A variety of tests done on venetian blinds over the past few years by independent testing laboratories for major window treatment manufacturers show that blinds tend to cut between 20 percent and 70 percent of radiated heat gain. A light metallic color reflective surface used on the window has also been shown to be advantageous to solar reflectivity. Ordinary micro and mini blinds, when closed, will help reduce energy loss in winter and unnecessary heat gain through glass in summer. They also provide no "light-leak" when closed, so therefore offer a continuous insulating barrier year-round.

Installation which allows the least amount of space between the blind and the window is best. The blinds should fit snugly within the window frame to contribute to its efficiency. When used with draperies, valances, lambréguins and other decorative fabric top treatments, energy efficiency is increased.

Although the sun's light and heat should be obstructed on some windows, it is a good practice to leave some operable windows unobstructed to vent any excess heat and to collect cooling breezes. For example, the afternoon sun is pouring in through the western exposure, and there are also windows on the northern or southern exposures in a room. Blinds on the western exposure should be shut tightly in the summer to prevent heat gain. Blinds on the other exposures should be opened for cooling ventilation. In winter, the opposite would be true. Blinds on the western exposure should be opened to admit the sun's heat, while blinds on the shaded exposures should be tightly closed to prevent heat loss.

Mini and Micro blinds are a cost effective, functional and aesthetically pleasing investment for the energy wise homeowner. In addition to year-round insulating properties, venetian blinds provide view control, bounce light to the ceiling and room interior, and coordinate with any decor.

Plywood paneling updates a 19th century parlor

Homeowners renovating older homes inherit the problems of the ages. Even in the living room, also known as the "front room" or parlor, homeowners often are confronted with troublesome walls due to decades of repeated painting or wallpapering and just plain aging. Now, there is an easy alternative to the time consuming and expensive process of stripping walls or replastering. Prefinished plywood paneling, which comes in 4' x 8' sheets, can be applied directly over structurally sound, problem walls. Available in an array of decorative designs, including textures, stripes, florals, wood looks and real wood veneers, plywood paneling is quickly becoming the consumer's favorite decorating material.

A 19th century parlor has been restored to its original charm with floral striped plywood paneling on the walls. It was designed by Michael Cannarozzi for the Plywood Paneling Council. Cannarozzi chose peach-blossoms-and-lace, vertically striped plywood paneling for traditional elegance with an easy care material. Says Cannarozzi, "This traditional design plywood paneling provides maximum style, conceals the irregularities of tired, old walls and wipes clean with a damp cloth."

The paneling's soft peach and gray tones on white brighten the room and enhance furniture. 18th century reproduction furniture include a peach brocade chair and cherry lowboy with a mirror in a cherry frame.

Double hung draperies, rose moire over white sheers, complete the elegant window treatment. Old etchings are hung Victorian-style from blue moire ribbons. An antique lace tablecovering complements the lowboy. Brass scallop shell wall lamps, a crystal footed vase and English ironstone tea service echo the grace and hospitality of earlier traditional parlors.

Custom detailing includes use of strips of plywood paneling, applied horizontally at the ceiling line, to create a unique crown border set off with classic white molding. This is often a good solution for covering extra high walls typical in older houses. In addition, a window valance was designed using a strip of plywood paneling applied over a simple frame of 1" x 2", finished with classic white molding. Both the crown borders and window treatment are easy do-it-yourself projects.

For a booklet on decorating with plywood paneling send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Plywood Paneling Council, Box FHT, 1633 Broadway, New York, New York 10019.

A 19th century parlor was restored to its original charm. Plywood wall paneling in muted peach blossoms on lace stripes was selected for its beauty and ease in concealing cracked walls. Strips used horizontally create a ceiling border and face the window valance. Reproduction furniture and antique lace table-covering complete the mood.

Save big money with proper insulation

Out of all the energy used by the typical American home, 60 percent goes for heating and air conditioning!

For the typical American, who likes to save money, that's one great big opportunity.

Significant amounts of energy and the money it costs can be saved by adding insulation, weatherstripping, caulking, storm windows and doors to houses that need them, according to Edison Electric Institute (EEI), the association of investor-owned electric utilities.

All of these improvements aim for one simple goal: to prevent heat from moving in the wrong direction. During cold weather, heat must be kept from leaving the home; and in the air-conditioning season, heat must be prevented from coming inside.

It pays to control heat flow. EEI reports that upgrading a poorly insulated older home to adequate standards can reduce its energy bill for heating and cooling by as much as one half! Even upgrading a moderately-insulated new home can save 20 to 30 percent on its heating and cooling bills. The initial cost may be paid back by energy savings in as little as two to seven years, and after that it's all profit.

It's a good idea to get some expert advice before purchasing tools and materials, but all of these projects are within the skills of most handy do-it-yourselfers.

Caulking is probably the easiest job. All it takes is a caulking "gun" and cartridges of thick flowing caulking compound, and a little practice. Its purpose is to fill up cracks around door and window frames or anywhere else that let air flow between inside and outside.

Cracks may be found by feeling for air flow inside, especially on a windy day, or by using a flashlight at night to see if light shines through to the other side. Old caulking should be checked periodically; if it has cracked or loosened, it should be replaced.

Cracks or gaps may also be closed by weatherstripping, pressed against surfaces or into openings.

A small crack may not seem like a problem, but a little arithmetic is enlightening. If a 40 by 83 inch door is surrounded by a gap only 1/16 inch wide, that gap totals more than 15 square inches in area. That's like having a hole the size of a brick through the wall. It pays, obviously, to close it. In fact, air leakage may claim up to 30 or 40 percent of a home's annual heating and cooling costs.

Good insulation is equally important, and the easiest areas to insulate are usually an unheated attic and a floor over an unheated basement or crawl space.

The insulation is installed on the unheated side, with a vapor barrier facing the heated side to prevent moisture from coming through and condensing inside the insulation. Where appropriate, loose insulation may be poured over a separately-installed vapor barrier. Insulating batts or blankets with attached vapor barriers need only be unrolled, cut to length and, if necessary, stapled to joists or supported by rods or wire mesh.

Where insulation has already been installed, more insulation can be overlaid. No additional vapor barrier should be added, because it would only trap moisture inside the existing insulation.

Buy wood furniture

•Examine all wood furniture with a hand as well as the eye. Inspect the finish for scratches and insist on smoothness. Rough areas suggest inadequate sanding. Beware of streaks, bubbles, drips or lacquer runs, excess finish materials in corners and one-dimensional wood grain finishes.

•Operate all moving parts. Remove drawers, table leaves, trays, doors and adjustable shelves and make sure they all function properly.

•Examine the sturdiness of the drawer's assembly, making sure that hardware is strong, has no rough edges and is bolted from the inside. Also check to see that the side and back panels are joined by sturdy, close-fitting dovetailed joints. The interior of the drawer should have a smooth finish to prevent fabric snags.

•Check for evenly hung doors and securely attached hardware, properly secured glass and sturdy, level shelves with sufficient support.

•Finally, find out how to care for the furniture. Check hang tags and manufacturers' instructions for any special care concerns.

Vinyl-framed windows add value to home

Early colonial settlers considered their homes' windows so valuable that they often took them along with their other household possessions when they moved westward.

Windows then were considered valuable because of their handmade glass panes. Although no one today would think of taking their windows along when they move to another home, they still are important elements in a home's overall design and efficiency.

According to builders' estimates, windows represent as much as 10-20 percent of the cost of a home, excluding land. When building a $100,000 house, for example, they are likely to cost from $10,000-$20,000. Consequently, consumers should do some careful "window shopping" when they are buying new or replacement windows.

For most people, the primary criteria for choosing a particular window are esthetics, energy-efficiency and low maintenance requirements.

Vinyl-framed windows with insulated glass combine esthetics, high insulation values, low maintenance, durability and resistance to rotting, pitting, corrosion and condensation.

Most windows today are made with insulated glass, and look attractive when new. After being exposed to wind and weather, however, some window frames show signs of aging and deterioration such as rotting or peeling paint and corrosion.

Solid vinyl-framed windows with insulated glass keep their fresh looks despite the weather. They don't need to be painted, and they don't rot, peel, blister or corrode. Double and single-hung styles of Vinyline rigid vinyl windows, a leading brand, have tilt-in sashes for easy and fast cleaning from inside the house.

Vinylene windows are available with white, almond, bronze and woodgrain frames. Most every style is available, too, from conventional casements to high-style round-tops.

Natural gas fireplaces are cleaner

Natural gas fireplace logs or a gas fireplace insert can reduce air pollution and save money for homeowners, according to the American Gas Association.

An A.G.A. analysis shows that the use of natural gas in fireplaces can save as much as 50 percent when compared to the cost of using firewood.

According to housing industry statistics, 62 percent of all new homes built in the United States in 1986 had one or more fireplaces. Currently, nearly a fourth of the nation's new home builders offer natural gas outlets in fireplaces.

The cost of heating an average room with a gas log or fireplace insert ranges from 14 to 60 cents per hour. By using such auxiliary heating, homeowners can turn down their thermostats and reduce monthly heating bills by as much as 40 percent, the A.G.A. study says.

The estimated annual operating cost for gas logs is $74.40, based on use of a 20,000 Btu per hour unit 600 hours per heating season.

A.G.A. says that burning natural gas instead of wood reduces air pollution because natural gas is much cleaner burning than wood.

Currently the United States has more than a 50-year supply of natural gas from American sources. Many experts foresee enough gas supply for hundreds of years of use.

Gas cooking is preferred

More American consumers prefer cooking with efficient, economical natural gas today than ever before, according to the American Gas Association.

Like professional chefs, today's home-makers prefer natural gas because of the ability to control temperature without warm-up or cooling delays.

Natural gas ranges save cooking time, and cost less to operate, A.G.A. says.

The newest advances in gas ranges are the burner ignition systems that replace the standing pilot light with a spark or "glow coil" ignition device. When the control dial is turned on, an electric current travels to the spark or glow plug to ignite the gas. Doing away with a pilot light saves about 30 percent of the energy used to cook, and reduces excess heat in the kitchen.

Gas heating costs less, more efficient

A ten-year study shows that consumers prefer natural gas heat because they believe it costs less, is more efficient, is more dependable and provides more comfortable heat, according to the American Gas Association.

This consumer study is backed up by a recent Department of Energy (DOE) study which projects that in 1990 natural gas prices will be nearly four times less than the cost of electricity, and up to 30 percent less costly than oil for residential customers.

DOE price statistics show that a new more efficient natural gas heating system can save consumers up to 72 percent in lifetime operating costs when compared with the cost of electric resistance heating. When gas is compared to the electric heat pump, natural gas heating has a 45 percent lifetime operating cost advantage.

Pulse combustion gas furnaces and boilers now on the market represent a new breed of sophisticated gas heating equipment. For example, the pulse combustion furnace is up to 97 percent fuel efficient.

DOE energy guide label ratings show that efficient gas water heaters can save a consumer up to several hundred dollars per year to operate over the cost of operating an electric water heater. The new gas water heaters are as much as 85 percent efficient.

Gas dryers will dry approximately three loads of clothes for the same price it takes electricity to do one load.

Gas dryers can save as much as 65 percent of fuel cost over electric dryers, according to the A.G.A.

Gas ranges with energy saving features, such as burner ignition systems, can save about 30 percent over ranges with pilot lights.

***
The United States has a million mile underground natural gas pipeline system which delivers energy to 166 million American consumers.

Gas grill cooking tips

The natural gas grill provides dependable outdoor cooking with a convenient fuel supply. The American Gas Association recommends these energy saving tips when using a gas grill:

- Limit preheating time.
- Use only one burner on dual burner grills unless both burners are needed.
- Use the lowest flame setting possible.
- Cook with the grill cover closed for more smoked flavor and shorter cooking times.
- Cook slow cooking foods on grill to keep heat out of the kitchen and save on air conditioning.
- Cook several foods or entire meals at one time on the grill.
- Cook a full grill of steaks or burgers. Freeze unused portions for later use.
- Thaw frozen foods before grilling unless otherwise directed.

- Use a thermometer or timer to eliminate over cooking and guess work.
- Keep "burn-off" cleaning time to a minimum.
- Keep grill clean and properly maintained.

Make Natural Gas Part Of The Plan.

If you're planning to build a new home, you've already made some pretty important decisions — such as where to put the fireplace, how to design the kitchen, the number of bedrooms, and so on. But you may not have spent much time choosing the best type of household energy for your home. You should.

Consider this... natural gas gives you a reliable, cozy all-around warmth that you just can't get with any other household energy source. Not even with expensive supplemental heat.

So make gas part of your plan. You can specify natural gas to heat your entire home comfortably. You can designate a gas water heater, and get a long, continuing supply of hot water for bathing, laundering and dishwashing. And with gas, you can dry your clothes faster and get that critical temperature control you need for cooking.

So if you're building or buying a new home, don't just consider natural gas...insist on it. Make natural gas part of the plan. For more information call Commonwealth Gas at 393-7211, or your qualified gas contractor.

Lottery Revenue

Anxiously awaiting the outcome of the Virginia lottery referendum are officials in Maryland, West Virginia, the District of Columbia and North Carolina.

Creating the anxiety is the scare that a Virginia lottery will draw back into the Old Dominion substantial revenue that has been going across state lines as Virginians play neighboring lotteries. A September poll by the Richmond Times-Dispatch revealed that 45 percent of the Virginians in the survey have already played a lottery in another state.

Yes, Virginians are now spending tens of millions on lottery tickets. Maryland officials estimated that 30 percent of the participants in their lottery are Virginians. The three top winners in the Washington D.C. lottery are from Virginia. And some of the hottest-selling areas for the West Virginia lottery are along the Virginia border.

North Carolina does not yet have a lottery, but Tarheel legislators are nervously worried about the money that will flow to Virginia should the lottery be approved. Observers say it is all but certain North Carolina will soon join the growing number of lottery states. If Virginia says no to the lottery, no one has yet considered how much Old Dominion hard cash could gush across the 325-mile border into the North Carolina treasury. It is unthinkable.

If Virginia votes down the lottery Nov. 3, experts predict the issue will be dead for at least five years. By that time it is estimated that more than 40 states will have lotteries — 27 are in place today. Also, the lottery states are already forming multistate lotteries and the federal government is considering the idea of a nationwide effort. Congressional proponents say a federal lottery would supplement, not replace, state lotteries.

Like it or not, lotteries are flourishing. A constant 60 percent of the U.S. population favors state-run lotteries. If not approved next Tuesday, Virginia will join Utah, North Dakota and maybe a half dozen other states over the next few years that will still be on the sidelines. Meanwhile, across the nation, lottery income will pay for deserving projects such as education, health and social services. And we will wonder where our money went. — H.B.

Special voter questions

In addition to selecting political candidates and considering the lottery, Virginia Beach voters this Tuesday will also be asked to make some major decisions on one binding and four advisory questions which will affect the city's future.

The advisory questions involve trees, money, roads and the school board. The binding question is over the construction, maintenance and renovation of recreational facilities.

Technically, the questions are two types: The Charter Election (advisory referendum) questions determine whether citizens favor the issues presented. If approved, these issues are then presented to the General Assembly to consider enabling legislation which will allow the city council to implement the ordinance. General Obligation Bonding Authorization (binding referendum) questions, if approved, require city council to take specific action. The only binding question on the ballot is in reference to funding for recreational centers.

The following is a list of the five questions to appear on the Nov. 3 ballot, along with an explanation and elaboration as to the exact implications of a yes or no vote.

Question (binding) — Shall the City of Virginia Beach contract a debt and issue its general obligation bonds in the maximum amount of $32,850,000 pursuant to the City Charter and the Public Finance Act to provide funds, together with other available funds, to finance the acquisition, construction and equipping of community recreational facilities in each of the Lynnhaven, Bayside and Princess Anne boroughs and renovation and improvement of the existing Bow Creek community recreational facility?

Explanation — To construct, equip and renovate recreation facilities. 1) Renovate existing Bow Creek Recreational Center, enclose patio and pool, generally upgrade and renovate. 2) Build three new centers in Bayside, Great Neck and Princess Anne. 3) New centers will include complete facilities, similar to Kempsville Recreation Center. Total cost: $32,850,000. Construction and operation will be funded by an increase of 3.8 cents, per $100 assessed real estate for real property value.

A YES VOTE MEANS facilities will be built and maintained. All facilities will be built at the same time.

A NO VOTE MEANS facilities will not be built.

Lottery and gambling

Editor:

On November the 3rd, Billy O'Brien's lottery proposal will be put before the people for a vote. Lottery proponents are confident they have the votes required to usher in "Legalized Gambling," and unless rural Virginia votes heavily, they could be right.

There are several common arguments in support of gambling, and on behalf of the "Anti-Lottery" folks I want to answer those pro-lottery allegations.

The first assertion is that people will gamble anyway, so let's legalize the lottery for the purpose of making more tax money. The funds generated by the lottery would be equivalent to about $25 per taxpayer per year. Virginia already has a surplus on hand, and has no business "prowling for suckers."

The second argument is that prohibition didn't work, and you can't legislate morality. Prohibition tried to outlaw a deeply ingrained cultural habit of alcohol drinking that had existed for years. Virginia has no history of lottery playing and should not be party to a new vice. Laws should promote what is good and discourage what is bad. Some people are going to steal, rape, and murder, and commit racial discrimination; however, there is no reason to legalize these crimes. If something is morally wrong and bad public policy, the State should not legalize it or promote it.

To those that say that a lottery is a painless, easy way to raise revenue, let me say that the social cost of legalized gambling is way too high. No one has computed exactly how much money a society loses in lost jobs, lost work time, embezzlement, check fraud, income tax evasion, and a host of broken lives, distraught family members, etc., from gambling-induced crime and compulsive gamblers. Voters who have no idea what the final cost of a lottery will be should not vote to approve it.

Some proponents say that all of life is a gamble, and they probably have a "Life is a Beach" bumper sticker on their car. They allege that a person could be hit by a truck on the way to work. Although it is true that life contains some risk, those risks are not artificially induced the way gambling is. To collect someone's money on the guise of a "grand slam" when the odds are 500,000 to 1 is unconscionable and the same thing as stealing.

To claim that the lottery is the little guy's stock market is an equally hollow argument. Anyone, even with modest sums, can invest in the stock market. Although the stock market is a risk, one can investigate the facts and figures of companies and sell off stock if it turns out to be a bad investment. You cannot sell a worthless lottery ticket, and illusions don't pay dividends.

The lottery proponents' argument that the lottery will engender hope into the frustrated, mundane lives of poor folks is worthless. The poor will

Just say no to lottery

Editor:

Virginia provided much of the ideological foundation for the formation of our country. Even during secession in the 1860's, Virginia was very deliberate in making its decision. Once again, the South and the nation are awaiting Virginia's decision on state-sponsored gambling.

Other than Florida, there are no state-sponsored lotteries in the South. Virginia has quietly become the battleground on whether state-sponsored gambling will eventually pervade Southern states.

Those who have carefully considered the economic, law enforcement and social aspects of a state lottery are convinced this is a bad bet for Virginia. State leaders such as past governors Godwin, Holton and Robb; Attorneys-General Coleman and Terry; and the State Chamber of Commerce oppose the lottery. These leaders strongly believe that just because we have lotteries along Virginia's northern borders is no reason to turn the Commonwealth into the "me too State!" Just say "NO" on November 3rd.

Don't invoke Jefferson's name

Editor:

I am sorry that you have come out editorially for the lottery, but obviously respect your right to take any opinion you find correct. It is, however, regrettable to find you invoking the name of Thomas Jefferson for your position when in fact, it goes against everything he stood for in government. Especially that government is to help people, not hurt and take advantage of them.

Phew! cat food

Opening a fresh can of cat food is probably the worst thing a person can do after just getting up. But, it's something I get a whiff of every morning... and every night.

I also open up cans of dog food for my dog, Tasha. Although, that doesn't smell quite as bad, the way some varieties look can really make the stomach rumble, and I don't mean in hunger.

I had one friend unfortunately enough to have gotten a taste of catfood by mistake, picking up a piece of what he thought was leftover tuna fish salad lying on the counter. "What was that," he asked. His lips puckered, he acknowledged that it probably wasn't tuna fish. (To even suggest that my tuna salad could taste like cat food!)

I don't even try to speculate what cat food must taste like, but my cats really go wild over it, their meows heightening like the call of the wild. Unfortunately for the pocket book, my cats, as most are understood to be, are finicky eaters. They don't touch the cheaper stuff, ignoring it in their bowl or even pawing at it as if it was kitty litter. Then, they have this look that says, "How could you?" Instead, they prefer the stuff that comes in the smallest and most expensive cans.

I don't even try to speculate what cat food must taste like, but my cats really go wild over it, their meows heightening like the call of the wild.

What makes it even worse is that the dog prefers the cat food over her food. That's Tasha's dessert after she's done with her meal. Or, sometimes, she'll nudge the cats away from their bowls after only a quick sniff at hers.

Glancing at the ingredients listed on a can of Catfish Delight for cats, as compared to that on "beef chunks dinner," for dogs it's no wonder. The list would to a dog probably read like a gourmet recipe. Catfish, water, other fish parts and egg, dried.

Whatever is in the dog food, however, is better than leftover baked potatoes, salad and bread. I know this when Tasha gets leftover scraps from dinner, because even if one carrot fell into her bowl, it's the only thing left untouched.

But then, what does Tasha know. She prefers a mouthful of bone over a day-old bone. On a regular basis, this chef I know brings Tasha the last of a steamship round, with humanly delectable chunks of rare beef still clinging to a great big bone. Having grown accustomed to seasoning these bones to her taste, Tasha will ignore the bone at first, or else bury it somewhere until it's ready.

She has to hurry or keep a watchful eye out, so Joey, the little neighborhood dog that looks like a dirty dust mite, led by the scent to Tasha's territory doesn't steal her bones. Tasha knows that if she isn't careful Joey, as little as he is, is as strong as an ant and can easily carry twice his weight over to his side of the street.

It often seems that the only thing my animals live for is me. In that case, I've got three lucky animals.

Vote no on flawed school board question

Let's Talk

By Rob Jones
President
Virginia Beach
Education Assoc.

The VBEA Board of Directors took a stand in opposition to the Elected School Board Referendum at their October 21 meeting. The group took no stand on the merits of elected school boards; however, as the question before the voters will include charter change language which leaves the funding of our schools in doubt, the board stands in opposition to the referendum.

On October 12, our city council decided the wording of the Elected School Board question on which we will be voting November 3. There are actually two questions. The first is "Should we elect our school board?"

The second question is, "Should the revenues of the school system be limited to 60% of the real estate tax revenues, 35% of the charter bond revenues, and 5% of other revenues?" Many voters are not ready for this question, and frankly, the average voter will not know what he is being asked to decide.

The VBEA is on record supporting elected school boards with full fiscal autonomy.

If the economic trends of the past five years continue, this level of funding may well prove to be adequate. Assistant City Manager Giles G. Dodd stated, "As the ordinance is proposed to be effective July 1, 1992, it may be that school requirements could be handled with a limitation not to exceed 60%." "May be" is just not good enough when we are talking about the future of our schools.

School board member Gerald Gibbs, conducted a sensitivity analysis of the proposed funding formula and drew the following conclusion, "There isn't anyone who can look you in the eye and say, 'Sixty percent will do it.'" Gibbs correctly predicts that fluctuations in any one of eight variables could leave the schools underfunded. The variables cited are: total real estate evaluations, amount of general sales tax, amount of other collected Virginia Beach taxes, amount of state appropriations, amount of federal grants, amount of debt service, total mill rate, and the costs to run the schools.

We know that the Standards of Quality are going to call for decreased class sizes in first grade and secondary English class sizes. There must certainly be doubt in regard to the other variables. If we were to have a recession and see a decrease in growth of real estate evaluations from the present 13% rate to a 7% rate, our schools would be underfunded. I don't think we should adopt a school funding formula dependent on continued prosperity. Recent activity on Wall Street certainly makes me doubt the wisdom of predicting economic stability. The level at which we fund our schools should be based on educational realities, not arbitrary percentages.

VBEA Executive Director Jamie Chapman said, "This convoluted formula presupposes no improvements in our school system. As educators, we know that our quest for excellence must include major changes in our school system over the next decade. Many of these changes demand increased funding levels."

The Virginia Education Association is on record in support of elected school boards with full fiscal autonomy. What is proposed in the referendum question of November 3 is an elected school board with limited taxing authority. The funds allowed under this limited taxing authority may not adequately fund our schools. The Virginia Beach Education Association stands in opposition to the Elected School Board Referendum.

Up close, it's hot

As the pumper rolled to an abrupt stop in front of a two-story house, the firefighters swiftly stepped off the truck.

Heavy black smoke was puffing out of the two front windows. The window glass had already darkened and begun to melt. The fire captain walked around the fire truck and quickly sized up the situation. A car was parked in the driveway; it was 7:15 in the morning and it was a Saturday. There were people inside; it was their job to find them and bring them out.

The fire captain called for an inch and three-quarter wide hoseline and walked to the front door. He dropped to his knees and felt the door with the back of his hand. It was warm to the touch. He placed his mask on his face and put on his thick leather

The big question is, have we seen the end of the bull market, or did the Dow overshoot the 2300 level through the miracle of financial technology? And, even if computer programs and por-gloves. Another firefighter placed a metal pry bar into the door jam and leaned backward. The door sprung open and the smoke billowed out around them. The captain asked if his crew was ready and turned to enter the building.

The dark smoke encircled them and the heat stung their necks like a swarm of bees. They dropped to their stomachs to get below the smoke and heat. Slowly they pushed deeper into the smoky jungle. The captain turned to the right and felt the staircase and hollered back to his men that they were going up. He inhaled forward and felt the heat sting his ears.

"Get the nozzle up here and cool this place a little," he ordered.

The nozzleman slowly crawled up the several steps and opened the nozzle on a wide pattern. The hissing of the water bouncing off the hot walls could be heard outside by the driver. He quickly closed the nozzle and advanced up the stairs. The captain pushed open a bedroom door and crawled over to a bed. The bed was empty. He searched the rest of the room and rejoined his men in the hallway. They crawled down the hall and the heat was very intense. The bedroom door right in front of them was on fire. Flames began to come through the partially burned door and roll across the ceiling over top their heads.

"Hit it now," the captain shouted. The fire darkened down enough for them to move to the door frame. The firefighter again opened the nozzle and extinguished the rest of the fire.

Outside, the driver saw when the fire was hit because the smoke quickly changed to white steam. As additional fire apparatus arrived on the scene, the three firefighters came out to take a break. Their helmets were black and dripping soot almost as thick as oil. One firefighter sat down and pulled off his mask only to find his neck was severely blistered.

The three firefighters found no one inside. The family was on vacation. This type of fire happened over 581,500 times in the United States during 1986 alone. 5,850 people died in fires and 113 firefighters died putting those fires out. Property damage was in excess of $6.5 billion. Virginia Beach fire units responded to 562 house fires in 1986. Total fire damage just in those homes was over one and a half million dollars.

Do us all a favor; install smoke detectors and go by any fire station in Virginia Beach and ask for a pamphlet on fire safety. Don't become a statistic. THINK FIRE SAFETY AND PROTECT YOURSELF FROM THE RAVAGES OF FIRE.

folio insurance account for the excesses, have the U.S. and world economies sustained so much damage that the correction now becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy and all economic cycles do turn down?

I think it is worth pointing out some significant differences between now and 1929 that leaves the possibility that this crash may have been a huge 1962 style correction. First of all, back in '29, the economy was showing signs of trouble which is not the case in 1987.

Industrial production continues to improve and if the first 100 companies to report third quarter earnings are any indication, total third quarter profits will far exceed very aggressive estimates. In addition, inflation has been much better behaved than expected. These are not economic indicators that compare in any way with 1929.

Secondly, in '29 the fed tightened money supply and rates. They most surely will not repeat that mistake. Although between a rock and a hard place, the fed will create enough liquidity to offset the enormous loss of wealth worldwide while making it clear that this massive stimulus will be short-lived and not a refutation.

In the meantime, pray for a frog prince. Great leaders generally emerge when nations are in trouble. Trouble is not apparent yet the U.S., and the best we can hope for is that when it becomes so, a "dwarf" will turn into a giant. It's a hell of a gamble when the stakes are so large, but that's the way it is.

Contel announces expanded service

Contel of Virginia's 1987 service enhancement program continues as the company starts a construction project to serve its Virginia Beach customers.

In Princess Anne, company work crews are installing cable along Ferrell Parkway and London Bridge Road. The new cable will transmit telephone calls from customers in Hunt Club Forest and White Pines subdivisions. It will accommodate the commercial and residential expansion in the Three Oaks area.

Contel work crews are also installing cable in Pungo's Oceau Lakes subdivision, to provide telephone service for more than 150 new and future customers.

The $123,000 projects are part of an ongoing program that Contel conducts to continually enhance its customers' phone service.

This year Contel plans to build nearly $60 million in new facilities statewide to enhance the quality and availability of the phone service it provides to nearly 300,000 Virginia customers.

Continental Telephone of Virginia, a subsidiary of Contel Corporation, is the second largest telephone company in the state. In Virginia Beach, Contel serves its 15,000 customers with the latest digital switching technology.

Contel Corporation, a company with $3 billion in sales and revenues, provides a broad range of telecommunications and information processing products and services through four business sectors: telephone operations, business systems, federal systems and information systems.

Hancock licensed as professional engineer

A voice proven effective for Virginia Beach in Richmond

HOLLAND.

When you vote for Dr. Clancy Holland in Virginia Beach, you have a voice in Richmond. A voice proven effective in communicating your concerns, and commanding action.

In three short years, Dr. Holland has moved from 31st to 15th in a ranking of Virginia's most effective Senators. He has quickly won the respect of his peers, the confidence of his constituents, and the cooperation of the administration, all important factors in providing effective leadership.

Moving forward on roads.

Dr. Holland serves on the State Transportation Committee, which holds the key to better roads for Virginia Beach. One billion dollars in statewide expenditures for highways has been approved. Give Clancy Holland the chance to win Virginia Beach's fair share.

Striving for improved education.

Having served 12 years on the Virginia Beach City Council, and one term as Mayor, Clancy Holland knows Virginia Beach schools. Let Dr. Holland continue to speak up for higher teachers' salaries, and more support for college-bound, vocational, and special education programs.

Taking local concerns to the top.

It's never been easier to make yourself heard. Dr. Holland maintains a legislative office in Virginia Beach, where citizens can bring their questions and complaints, and be assured of concerned response and effective representation in Richmond.

Bringing prosperity home.

Clean industry and controlled development are keys to continued vitality of the Virginia Beach economy. But without water, new jobs and an expanded tax base will wither on the vine. From his seat on the Agricultural and Natural Resources Committee, Clancy Holland can continue to push for a pipeline from Lake Gaston.

Send an effective voice back to Richmond. Re-elect Dr. Clancy Holland to the Senate.

Virginia Beach Central Library recognized

The new Virginia Beach Central Library was recently recognized by the Virginia Society of the American Institute of Architects in its initial Annual Energy Design Awards Program.

The 95,000 square foot library was cited for energy conservation features and quality of architectural design. The City of Virginia Beach and the Design Collaborative, Architects, were named as recipients of the award.

Computer analysis of preliminary design alternatives predicted that lighting and air conditioning would generate seventy-seven percent of the building's energy costs. In order to diminish these costs, the Library's design features a unique shape that collects natural daylight and shades the windows during hot summer months.

Other energy conservation features include automatic light dimmers, a white roof to reflect heat, and high levels of insulation. East and west facing windows were eliminated from the design and existing windows use tinted glass to admit more visible light and less solar heat.

The Central Library is located at 4100 Virginia Beach Boulevard and is scheduled to open in January 1988.

Hector Rivera reappointed

Hector Rivera, assistant city manager, City of Virginia Beach, has been reappointed to serve on the International City Manager Association/National Association of Schools of Public Administration and Public Affairs Academic Affairs Committee for 1987-1988. Previously Rivera served on the Assistant's Steering Committee.

The purpose of the committee is to strengthen and improve the flow of information between employers and the academic community, provide local government managers with information on current trends in the academic preparation of professionals for public service, help identify qualified practitioners to serve on NASPAA site visit teams, and identify academicians with expertise in subjects for future ICMA publications.

Rivera has a masters degree in public administration from the University of Hartford in Connecticut and in sociology from the New School for Social Research in New York.

Prior to his employment with the city in 1985 he was the Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Human Resources for the State of Connecticut.

In addition to the ICMA, Rivera is a member of the American Society for Public Administration, American Public Welfare Association, and American Academy of Political and Social Science.

VWC board hears reports on campaign; record enrollment

By Mary S. Bruner
Special to The Sun

The achievement of the halfway point in the $9 million 25th Anniversary Campaign and an eight percent enrollment increase were reported to the Virginia Wesleyan College Board of Trustees at its recent fall meeting.

Contributions and pledges for the five-year campaign have reached $4,525,000 after one year of solicitation, and construction of the first of three new building projects in the College's expansion plan began this summer, according to Thomas C. Broyles, campaign chairman. The 12,760-square-foot Center for the Humanities will be completed next fall, providing six classrooms, 20 faculty offices, a language laboratory, and offices for the College's Adult Studies Program.

Trustees hope to decide by the spring meeting of the board which will be the next of the three building projects in the expansion program - either the completion of the second academic village or a central dining facility.

In commenting on the record enrollment of 1,203, President Lambuth M. Clarke told the board that in addition to doubling the number of applications over the past two years (from 777 in 1985 to 1,594 in 1987), the average SAT scores of freshmen increased 38 points over last year's figure and 60 points since 1985. These scores place the College 30 points above the Virginia SAT average of 906 and 29 points above the national average of 907.

W. Steve Stocks, vice president for admission and financial aid, reported that the 7.8 percent enrollment increase included 994 in the regular daytime program and 209 in the Adult Studies Program. The freshman class has 35 percent non-Virginians, a five percent increase over last year's out-of-state freshman enrollment. Applications from other states have more than tripled this past year. However, Stocks says "the College will continue to have a special commitment to Hampton Roads students."

Fifty-eight percent of this fall's total enrollment came from Hampton Roads cities with more than thirty-five percent from Virginia Beach.

Dean Wilson also told the Board that for the third consecutive year, ten freshman Wesleyan Scholars were selected as a part of the College's Honors Program.

In other action, trustees confirmed a record budget of $8,983,730, a 13.6 percent increase over the fiscal 1987 budget. More than 85 percent of the budget is met by student tuition and fees. Thirty-five percent of the new budget is designated for instruction and academic support. Thirteen percent will be used for student services. Fourteen percent is designated for operation and maintenance of the physical plant. Five percent, or $483,000, from the operating budget goes for student financial aid. (The total amount to be allocated for financial aid during this fiscal year is $3.6 million, including funds from scholarship endowment income and federal and state student aid resources for 907 students.) Tuition at Virginia Wesleyan for the 1987-88 academic session is $6,200, an 8.7 percent increase over 1986. A formal decision will not be made until later this fall on the 1988 tuition, according to Stocks.

Questions

Question (advisory) — Should the City of Virginia Beach, pursuant to its Charter by the general law of the State of Virginia, have the right to provide for the protection and/or replacement of trees during land development and subdivision activities on private property in the City of Virginia Beach?

Explanation — Tree protection and replacement. 1) Requests that the city council ask the General Assembly to permit the City of Virginia Beach to regulate the cutting of trees and require the replacement of trees removed during development.

A YES VOTE MEANS city council would request such authority.

A NO VOTE MEANS city council would not make such a request.

Question (advisory) — Shall the City of Virginia Beach request the General Assembly to amend Section 6.05:1 to the City Charter to increase the amount of bonds or other debt obligations that may be issued annually without voter approval at an election from the present allowed borrowing of $10,000 of new debt plus that amount which was retired during the calendar year to an amount which shall not exceed .25 percent of the assessed value of real estate in the city subject to taxation, as shown by the assessment for taxes for the last preceding year?

Explanation — Increase debt authority without voter approval. 1) Without voter approval, the city may currently only borrow $10 million plus the amount of debt retired during the past year. That amount is currently about $24 million per year. 2) The General Assembly would be asked to approve increasing the limit to one quarter of one percent of the assessed property value each year. This would change as the assessments increase or decrease each year. 3) The additional amount the first year would be about $8 million, increasing the borrowing limit from $24 million to $32 million.

A YES VOTE MEANS the city could borrow more money without voter approval.

A NO VOTE MEANS the city would maintain the current borrowing limit.

Question (advisory) — Shall the City of Virginia Beach request the General Assembly to repeal Section 6.05:2 of the City Charter which presently allows the issuance of $8,000,000 of bonds for roads, highways and bridges without voter approval at an election if 20% of the bonds issued under Section 6.05:1 without an election are reserved for roads, highways and bridges?

Explanation — Repeal of existing road and highway authority. 1) Two years ago the General Assembly approved a change to the City Charter giving the city the authority to borrow an additional $8 million for road, highway and bridge improvements. The majority of city council agreed not to use this authority.

A YES VOTE MEANS the city would request that its authority to borrow an additional $8 million above its present borrowing limitations for road, highway and bridge improvements would be REPEALED.

A NO VOTE MEANS the city will continue to have the authority to borrow an additional $8 million for roads, highways and bridges. The city will RETAIN its authority.

Question (advisory) — Should City Council of the City of Virginia Beach request the General Assembly of Virginia to amend the City's Charter so as to provide that members of the school board shall be elected by the voters of the city and that the elected school board be granted limited taxing authority?

Explanation: Direct election of school board with limited tax authority. 1) The school board is currently appointed by city council and receives funding from city council and the Commonwealth of Virginia. Although city council currently approves the school board budget according to 10 specific categories, city council has no authority to alter, modify or approve individual line items within that budget. 2) The school board would be elected at large with residence requirements for certain boroughs, similar to the system used to elect city council members. 3) The school board would have the authority to tax real estate limited to a cap of 60% of the total real estate rate. (Subject to General Assembly action. 3) The school board would have the authority to issue up to 35% of the charter bond limit on an annual basis.

A YES VOTE MEANS the city will request the General Assembly to allow the option of electing a school board with limited taxing authority.

A NO VOTE MEANS the school board will continue to be appointed by city council and will have no taxing authority and will be funded by the city council.

All too often, local residents are quick to criticize the myriad of decisions the city council and school board make. Citizens are not shy to voice their dissatisfaction about roads, growth, schools and how the environment is protected. This Tuesday, Virginia Beach registered voters may express themselves, by voting, to actually help shape the course of things to come. Very important issues are before the public. It is up to the public to respond. Think first, then vote.

actually be shackled by the "lotto playing" and they can least afford it. It is seven times more likely that one is struck by lightning than that you win at the lottery, and that's before taxes.

Lastly, to the argument that States legalize tobacco and alcohol and share in their distribution, via taxation, and the lottery is no different, morally, I would say, "WHOA".

Whatever the morality of legalized tobacco and liquor, they are quite different in two respects: first, states do not promote tobacco and liquor use in the same fashion states promote the lottery. No state commissioner of alcohol or tobacco boast publicly of increased liquor and tobacco usage, with increased excise tax revenue. With the lottery in place the state will become like a "sidewalk hawk". Second, both liquor and tobacco use are custom, and deeply ingrained cultural habits. It would be very difficult for the state to ban such things (albeit a benefit), and since tobacco is one of Virginia's most profitable businesses, its prohibition is unlikely.

The bottom line is that Virginia has always led, by setting a good example for the country, and yet in this instance it is acquiescing to the weakness of other states, the lure of quick money, and the uninformed plea of a spoiled public.

'Arsenic and Old Lace' set

At right, Meg Henderson and Thom Moore are featured as Elaine and Mortimer in the production.

Homeless

$425. The two Samaritan Houses are the only response to the homeless families.

He suggested the city reevaluate its policy of making target neighborhoods primary recipients of Block Grant Funds and using some of it for housing. He said that the city has received $29.5 million in block grant funds in (13) years but that housing for the poor has remained static.

Mary Thurston, of Mothers, Inc., and the Weather Watch Shelter, said that zoning is an obstacle to establishing shelters for the homeless. The city, she said, has no zoning classification to provide for shelters.

She said that emergency shelters and affordable homes are needed in Virginia Beach. She said popular misconceptions about the poor exist in Virginia Beach, that "we have no poor. They come from elsewhere."

That they come from elsewhere is not so, she said. The poor have grown. She said the typical low-income family of four has $210 for a month for housing, $150 a month for food, $58 for utilities, $12 per person for health, and $11 for clothing.

She said that the problem should be approached regionally. She invited Council to accompany her on free food distribution routes and see for themselves. Call her, she said, at 481-4153.

Speaking on another issue, Edward Gibbs requested that the city develop a tool lending facility to provide tools needed for home maintenance. Tools, such as ladders, wheelbarrows, he said, may be used once or twice a year for home maintenance and the lending facility would be an inexpensive way to allow home owners to maintain their property. He said the concept was started in the Midwest. Norfolk started a facility in the mid '70's and has experienced a low incidence of failure to return tools.
